Representatives of the United States Congress and the City and County of San Francisco defiantly welcomed over 10,000 people to Kezar Stadium for the Gay "Olympic" Games Saturday

Congressman Phil Burton and Supervisor Doris Ward, who is Acting Mayor in the absence of Dianne Feinstein, were very purposeful in their inclusion of the word "Olympic." There appeared to be no question that the United States Olympic Committee may have won a court battle but they suffered a dramatipublic relations loss.

All press accounts of the Opening Day Ceremonies have been extremely positive. With journalists here from all over the world, the only newspaper that specifically stated it would not cover the games is the San Francisco Chronicle.

When contacted last Sun-day, the city desk editor told the Bay Area Reporter that the sports section was not interested in covering the event and a similar position was taken by the news department

Gay Athletic Games Open to Cheers

15,000 Watch Show in Kezar Stadium

by Scott Treimel

It is now a fact: no one who entered Kezar Stadium last Saturday for the opening ceremony of the Gay Athletic Games left unmoved. Rita Mae Brown hailed it as, "By God, a tremendous victory." Armistead Maupin noted "the presence of history." Congressman Philip Burton labeled it, "a proud, beautiful event." And when Doris Ward, as acting mayor said, "I proclaim this the Gay Olympic Games," the crowd shot to its feet, roaring in triumphant concert. Here it was, an unprecedented international promise fulfilled. The Gay Athletic Games I commenced with all the majestic bravado its meaning merits.

As mornings tend to break on Haight Street, Saturday morning broke gray and damp, but that was only the air. The spirit that hummed behind it was inexplicably expectant, inexplicable until a series of athletic suits began to dot the street and a man ran by with a sign that read KAN-SAS CITY. A small girl, who had been gazing blankly at her assortment of bottlecaps and twigs, was transformed. "Oh," she screamed, "the Gay Olympics," and took off

By noon the hum localized around Kezar Stadium where the Foggy City Squares hootenannied on the stage above the unlit Olympian disk and before a spectrum of rainbow flags. Decked in New Western Formal (buckeye garb in black and white) they do-si-doed, clod-hopped, and generally wing-dinged it Spectators filed into their seats. Fellows walked the aisles barking, "Peanuts, popcorn, Carmel Corn." I overheard two codgers retell the stories of how they came out.

Fed up with the weather, which now included infrequent but large drops of rain. the crowd on the north side of the stadium began to chant S-U-N, S-U-N, and at exactly one o'clock when MC Rita Mae Brown took the stage, the sun broke:

"We're here today," she said, "not to celebrate homosexuality, but to celebrate and affirm individual freedom. This went over big, for the audience in Kezar Stadium, only 12,000 was singularly mindful of liberation. It was an older audience and therefor an audience that had in vested more in liberation and understood what the Gay Games are about, liberating a fettered image. "The only people who are queer are the people who don't love anybody," Brown said.

Pamela Brooks sang the National Anthem, Rev. Troy Perry delivered the invocation, and the Freedom Day Marching Band and Twirling Corp hit the field. Later came the Games Flag Corp and the Los Angeles Great American Yankee Freedom Band, each equipped with its own bevy of twirlers, who dispelled once, and for all, the popular barb:

we do too have strong wrists

Most notable were Stephanie Phillips and Brooks Going. Phillips is an A-1 crackeriack twirler. Five-time winner of the national award she brought the crowd to its feet keeping three batons aloft at once. Going is the opposite four times he dropped his baton, yet he, too, received sustained applause. The crowd cheering and Brooks Going staring at his cursed baton struck me as emblematic of the Games' intent — as a triumph, in fact, of the Games' intent: you do your best, that's enough.

This is what Games Chairman Tom Waddell has been saying all along. The Games aim to humanize success by transforming the notion of failure (failure is not to try). The reception accorded Brooks Going seemed superlative testimony — Waddell's campaign has indeed campaign

When the first Gay Games are remembered, in Syndey. in Tel Aviv. at Lake George or Lake Geneva, the crux of that memory will be what happened next: the parade of athletes. This had been the center of the dream and this is what coaxed the tears. The parade of athletes is the universal totem, the teams marching in, the crowd on its feet, the camera crews running up the field then turning back to get the shot.

Following the athletes into the stadium and the welcoming speeches was Tina Turner. As the entertainer performed, the athletes crowded close to the stage. Because of contract commitments, video they would continue to cover and film crews were prevented from filming her show.

> The only news-gathering organization which violated the agreement of keeping their cameras off was the ABC Television Network. The network crew (not KGO-TV) was escorted by security out of the stadium and they were asked to return their press passes.

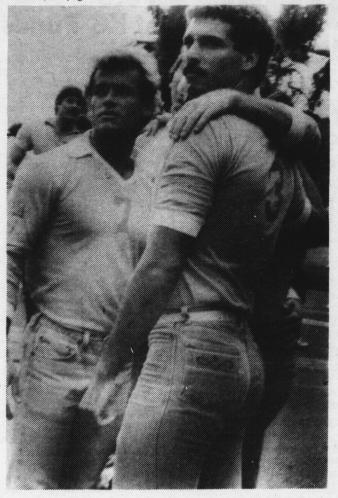

The final event of the afternoon was the lighting of the torch. As the athletes formed two lines the length of the playing field, Meg Christian sang the Gay Games Anthem. As she concluded, the combined San Francisco Gay Freedom Day Band and the Los Angeles Great American Yankee Band played the anthem as two former U.S. Olympic athletes, George Just minutes before the Frenn and Susan McGrievy, carried the torch to the main torch at the front of the stage.

> As the torch of the Games was lit, thousands of balloons were released into the sky above the stadium. The ceremonies then came to a conclusion and thousands of people boarded special buses, which were scheduled by Muni to provide express serv ice to the Castro.

The Opening Ceremonies of the Gay Games was one of the largest Gay and Lesbian events presented in the 20th century. The event was produced by David Bandy and directed by Allan Johnson. Carole Fitzgibbon was in charge of coordinating the athletes and Hydie Downard and Glenne McElhinney supervised the usher staff. Publicity was directed by Zohn Artman.

Congressman Phillip Burton denounced President Reagan's veto of the Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1982 as "tragic" and vowed to help lead the fight in Congress to override the veto.

ADDENDUM: By any stands last Saturday was small. First off, Kezar is an imposing, indomitable stadium. Built to hold 60,000, it has fallen into such bad repair its capacity is now restricted to 30,000. That less than half that number of tickets was sold directly indicts this community. True, $15 for a ticket is, to some, prohibitive. Truer still, Castro bars did brisk trade. And truest of all, this is beside the point. There was a theme to the answers I got when later I asked why people neglected the ceremony. It went like this: "I didn't know if it'd be a success." Precisely. The Stonewall queens didn't know that either.

Tickets are still available for the closing ceremony of the Gay Games. Caution, though, scalpers are selling counterfeits. Buy tickets only from authorized outlets.

INTERNATIONAL TRIO

The cuisine of Shanghai has a character of its own, and is enough of a novelty to warrant a visit to China House, 501 Balboa St. (reservations: 386-8858), where you'll find a tantalizing variety of Shanghai specialties. The restaurant is spacious, airy and stylish. Dark wood fixtures and chairs stand out against an immaculate white tile floor. This used to be a food market, and curious stained-glass insets above the windows announce it in neatly lettered words such as "vegetables," "groceries" and "poultry." From a market, it became a French restaurant, and the decor is more or less the same for its current tenants, Joseph and Cecilia Chung, proprietors of China House. The Chungs are charming, highly sophisticated people from Shanghai, as is most of their staff. They'll tell you all about Shanghai cuisine - how it's not as hot as Hunan and Szechuan, but is as distinctive as Mandarin and as flavorful as Canton. "Since Shanghai is a melting pot," says Cecilia Chung, "we use elements from all the regional cuisines, but always with a touch of Shanghai.'

The China House menu bears this out, for it offers a wide assortment of dishes, from the traditional beef with broccoli to more exotic fare like shredded rock cod with pine nuts, sweet fried wontons with a black-bean filling, and shrimp sauteed in a sweet onion sauce. The most unusual dishes are made with vegetables — shredded bean curd with salt cabbage, or a delectable eggplant concoction in which diced pieces of Oriental eggplant are braised to a bright-blue color with garlic and plum sauce. It's one of the prettiest dishes I've seen. I would also recommend the clams cooked in a zingy ginger sauce, and the shredded chicken salad that combines the flavors of peanuts and sesame oil. The service at China dinner for four at $45 is something of a collossally-scaled paintings of outdoor Western scenes (Yosemite, for example) are still there, and the time-honored menu remains pretty much the same.

The dinner menu offers a four-course meal for $19, and the generously portioned entrees include the Golden Eagle's hearty specialties, like boiled beef vinaigrette, hunter's stew (chicken, veal and beef) and chicken San Joaquin (braised with olives, tomatoes and mushrooms). The cuisine is unabashedly American, and very well prepared - particularly the fish. New England scallops are gently sauteed to a buttery perfection, and the sand dabs are juicy, sweet and very satisfying. The dinner salads are also well done, be it mixed green, heart of romaine or Caesar. Nine desserts are listed, all made on the premises, including pecan pie, double chocolate cake, caramel custard and a delicious cassis ice cream ablaze with black currants. Dinner at the Golden Eagle is relaxed and pleasant. Lunch is jam-packed, as it's always been.

The P.S. Restaurant, at 1121 Polk St. (reservations: 441-7798), has been a gay hangout for more than a decade, and now it's gone very fancy. A French chef has been brought in to upgrade the menu in the poshly redecorated dining room (glass and brass partitions, upholstered chairs and large sprays of flowers). The big surprise is that the chef is none other than Paul Dufour, formerly of La Bourgogne, Le Trianon and La Cabane. He's turned the P.S. menu around to a gourmet fare-theewell, and an even bigger surprise is the tariff. Prices are incredibly low for what you get. The quality, presentation and standards are as high as you'll find anywhere in town. It's only a matter of time before the P.S. management catches on to what it has and revises the House is impeccable, and the prices are price list. Dufour is an artist, and he's moderate to high. However, a prix-fixe drawing a more eclectic clientele to the predominantly gay bar and restaurant.

On a recent visit, Dufour was working with the regular P.S. menu, but what he did with fairly simple items like moved to a new and spectacular broiled petrale was remarkable. Are You From Big "D"?

Dallas treated itself to a Gay convention a few weeks back and just about everybody who thinks they are somebody turned up.

For starters let it put to rest the noxious notion about "socalled" Gay leaders. The real mcCoys actually exist. They flew into a melting 100° Dallas heat from 35 states laden with briefcases, scratch pads, and busy schedules. They gave over three days to thirty-six workshops and the conflabing of four national boards of director and two Texas Boards. Amid all the learning sessions and board meetings, the Forum on Acquired Immune Deficiency wended its tragic way. Doctors and health workers from all over came to compare and plan. And Morbidity Tables officially joined the Gay lexicon.

The six brightest stars in the national Gay firmament: NGTF's Lucia Valeska and Mel Boozer; The Fund for Human Dignity's Ginny Apuzzo; Human Right Campaign Fund's Jim Foster; Gay Rights Advocate's Jean O'Leary and MCC's Troy Perry displayed their multiple talents in oratory and strategy.

Conferees discussed everything from racism to sexism, from public relations to police relations

As these Colorado Gay Olympic athletes testify, America's heartland take on an everincreasing share of the Gay agenda (Photo: Rink)

As expected, San Francisco was well represented and, like New York, dazzled with its trend-setting ways. All the same the eyes of Gay leaders were on the men and women of Texas. All the major cities; Dallas, Houston, San Antonio, Austin, boast Gay alliances. Dallas' in true Texas fashion broadcasts a 600 membership. President Don Baker approaches the Gay rights movement as if he was president of Texas Instruments. He is all systems approach, effective management, and product control. Repeatedly, Baker made mention of Dallas being a conservative city. He and the Alliance play by the rules and they adroitly turn them to their advantage.

In itself bringing in 400 major Gay figures (and a few figurines) was not lost on the locals; by the weekend papers one would gather the city was actually proud of their guests. The Sunday paper ran three pages of copy (beginning on the front page) in six

One was equally touched with the muscle developing in other cities like Kansas City, Missouri where Gay coalitions are screening candidates and their choice for Democratic Congressional seat now faces a Republican in November.

But it was the Texans who stole the march with their hospitality, charm, and exquisite planning. It is reassuring to watch them coming into their own. For while those on both coasts continue to give the movement its shape and its style, the heartland of America will bring the movement substance and sanity. Qualities in deep need and essential for a struggle committed to

"A MIXED NUT"

* I am one of those "mixed nuts" that Mr. Sobel finds repugnant. In his letter (B.A.R., Aug. 19) he seems to want anyone who disagrees with his party line to stop espousing their politics at the Pacific Center. Isn't this so characteristic of the right with their hatred not only of the left but pluralism generally?

Mr. Sobel doesn't seem to be aware that there are many who find his ideology repugnant. Despite this I uphold Mr. Sobel's right to free speech as well as the right to espouse any ideology he sees fit.

In keeping with the spirit of the right, Mr. Sobel stereotypes all of us on the left as a "Mixed Nut Brigade." Considering such darlings of the right as state Senator John Schmitz, Jesse Helms, and Jerry Falwell, I suggest Mr. Sobel take deep thought on the maniacs of his own end of the political spectrum before he casts aspersions upon the rest of us.

A CLARIFICATION

* Since an article about my seminary graduation prompted a guest column by Terry Huwe, I feel a need to reply to his reply, though I'm aware that such a process could go on and on and on.

If the article or my comments in it left readers believing nothing occurred among lesbian and gay seminarians at Pacific School of Religion between Bill Johnson's time and my own (some ten years) then I'm glad Mr. Huwe filled us in on that point. However, I find nothing in that article or my comments which said or implied it.

What I did say was that I found my openness about my homosexuality continually putting off other les-bian and gay students who by choice or necessity embraced one or another form of hiding their sexuality. Mr. Huwe's guest column might, inadvertently I'm sure, leave a reader with the impression that PSR is a hotbed of upfront lesbians and gay men. In my three years there I found no such openness. In fact, also inadvertently I'm sure, Mr. Huwe gives a fine example of the point I was making by giving us his long list "openly" gay staff, lesbian feminists, gay movers and shakers, etc. without naming any names save his own and mine. Voila, the problem

I did not and do not make light of the difficulties lesbians and gay male seminarians face when they choose to be part of mainline churches. I think the initial article made clear some of the hostility they face. The very real moral quandary, which arises when intended ministers of the gospel feel compelled in one way or another to cloak their real identity, is piercingly sharp. They have my deep sympathy. Nor do I belittle the courage of those who risk self-disclosure, however limited and circumscribed it may be Such folks risk more in doing so than I have had to risk since my ecclesiastical superiors are not homophobes.

But I don't believe I'm imagining that there is a problem at PSR in the ability of non-MCC gay students to relate to MCCers. When in early 1982 MCC students were invited (by straight faculty) to lead in a weekly chapel service, only one non-MCC gay student even bothered to attend despite much advance publicity and our efforts to secure their participation

Ah well, I don't despair of PSR. In fact, I'm rather fond of the old place. I have every confidence that non-MCC lesbians and gays there will learn to respect our "upfrontness" without being so threatened by us.

★ If I may respond to Alan Martinez's criticism on my suggestion of the meaning of karma (good or bad). Alan seems content to accept "what is" the way of the world; thus no one has to change - (the I'm o.k.; you're o.k. syndrome). While I don't think we can change someone else, we can certainly change our own minds in a process of transformation augmenting our consciousness and aliveness.

From one enlightened perspective, the world seen through the body's eyes is all an illusion - so "what is" in that case is unreal. If you accept an ancient spiritual Teaching which says that we are all brothers and that Love is the only Reality, then you have quite a different Reality with which to experience life.

Therefore, Alan, we can indeed change something - our minds! We can change our way of thinking so that we deny the world of illusions, and awaken from a world of bad dreams. We awaken to the world of Light and Consciousness which makes us all brothers who remember our Source. In this way, the gay community can be in the vanguard of a spiritual revival infectious with Love

THUMBS DOWN ON PACIFIC CENTER

Should we support the Pacific Center for Human Growth? The problem with Pacific Center has been its reliance on grant writing for its funding since its start in 1973. As one of the founders of the organization (earlier known as East Bay Gay, Inc.), I was not at all pleased when Richard Boxer got board approval to spend full time going after grants. One of our first was a 50-50 matching grant for which we had to break our backs getting items to raffle, selling tickets, and promoting. Nobody knew who we were. Getting any substantial prize was impossible, so we settled for bottles of beer, leather jocks, and other minimals.

After that fundraiser, our grants came easier. In fact, so successful was Richard in getting grants that he began to offer classes in grant writing! He also sold his time as a consultant to other nonprofit groups. While this all seems well and good, Pacific Center suffered horribly. The group became known as stuffy elitist, and out of touch with the community. Well, it was! The self-perpetuating board of directors coupled with the lack of community support - who needed them with all those grants? - clearly showed that Pacific Center wasn't an organization of the people it served. That, along with their ability to attract mixedup psychology students trying out their class assignments made it appear as if Pacific Center were there the helm, it should have died years ago. It hung on because whether it be Berkeley, San Francisco. who-knows-where, there'll always be suckers for psychobabble who want to be rescued by the people at Pacific Center - people who are supposed to know what's best for their peons.

THUMBS UP ON PACIFIC CENTER

★ Unfortunately, a response to Mr. Gus Sobel's letter to the B.A.R. (August 19, Vol. XII. No. 33) is necessary. Believe me, I wish it weren't.

I'm afraid his left-handed compliment (pardon the expression) about the Pacific Center isn't sufficient to simply let it go by the wayside.

I am certainly pleased he agrees the Pacific Center has done "him good." Apparently not enough. I am sad for him that he finds himself on (the) right of both Goldwater and Reagan. However, that's the least of my concern. I am concerned when he slanders the Pacific Center. We are neither Marxist, nor Communist, nor Leninist, nor any other kind of "ist." We are a Mental Health Agency! Our goals, our intentions. our very premise is directed towards one aim: to make all Gay people - all men and women who come to the Center - feel better - hopefully good about themselves.

When clients come to our Center for counseling. we don't talk Reaganomics. or even Carter-nomics. we talk about adjusting to Gay life, about becoming "happy" if possible, about making relationships work.

This is the second time that Mr. Sobel thought it necessary to write such a letter. In the first one he slandered me personally.

He thinks we ought to be cut off from all public funding and feels we ought to support ourselves. Fine, Mr. Sobel. May we expect a check of $30,000 from you in the mail by Monday? You, sir, have been coming to the Pacific Center for years. What have you ever done for the Center??? What have you Personally, I feel lousy to have to write such a letter of response. I realize it sounds defensive. It also seems ridiculous to have to answer a crazy letter such as Mr. Sobel's. However, I don't come first: the Pacific Center does. As I sit here literally with tears in my eyes, having read on the front page of the very same issue in which Mr. Gus Sobel slanders us so stupidly of the illness of Paul Dague. It was Paul who started us on the road. It was he who first set up our Mental Health Dept. It was he to whom I came and said: "I like what I see: I want to help." Paul is not only a thoroughly professional man, he is sweet and wonderful and kind. I can't go on . . . Paul. my thoughts are with you indeed. I love you.

> Karli Bernstein Pacific Center Berkeley, CA

AND FROM THE VOLUNTEERS

* Due to a letter published in the B.A.R., we feel that a response is necessary

The Pacific Center offers: 1) emergency switchboard services; 2) peer individual counseling; 3) closed rap groups: 4) open drop-in groups: 5) public information; 6) non-bar social opportunities; and 7) third world outreach to the Gay/Lesbian community

All members who work for the Pacific Center are in fact volunteers. The funds are used to pay rent, telephone, other utilities and a coordination staff. Any issues discussed and/or mentioned are in regard to Gay/Lesbian issues. There is no public political advocacy in any direction and the Pacific Center staff is instructed to avoid influencing anyone's politica

At present, the funding consists - in part only the only PUBLIC financial aid we are receiving. The rest derives from private donations. If the Pacific Center were to rely only on private donations, one of two situations would occur. Either the Center would be come a private counseling service only for those who could afford it, or the Center would be forced to close its doors, thereby ending the above services to the Gay/Lesbian community

In light of these facts, we invite those interested to join us at the Center and encourage Alameda County residents to urge your county representatives to continue the funding.

* I am writing in response to the letter from Victor

Galotti who exhorts Gay men to get in shape, "get yourself to a gym," and "act like the man you are." I can only assume the kind of man he is describing is the man who dies at twenty, in a war, or at forty, of a heart attack

Mr. Galotti goes on to say one of the things we need is a little "self respect." A person with genuine self respect doesn't fee the need to force his body to outlandish proportions, or to classify those who don't as "wimps" and "drag queens." He also cites Jack alanne as a model of masculinity we should all admire. I suppose he doesn't realize that this is the same Jack Lalanne who was an avid and outspoken supporter of Anita Bryant and her anti-Gay pogrom. The same Jack Lalanne who early on in his mediocre career posed nude in Gay magazines. Any parallel in his obsession for a super-macho body and his obvious

There is nothing "wrong" with those who choose to work out at gyms. The "wrong" is when we oppress those who choose not to. We've all suffered because of that very mentality that calls us sissies, and attempts to eradicate our "feminine" qualities. The las thing we need now is the same fascist posturing from our own. When do we stop taking our cues from the heterosexual dictatorship, and begin defining our own lives in a way that will make US happy?

One final note, I would like to applaud Arthur Evans for his continued attempts to inject a small amount of reason into the Gay community. He was fighting for our rights when most of his critics were struggling to come to grips with their own lives by working for the Young Republicans by day, haunting

ANTI-SPARTICIST LEAGUE

★ I never cease to be amazed by the utter bankruptcu of the Sparticist League (SL). I was appalled by the opportunistic manner in which the SL attached itself. leech-like, to the sentiment against the Nazi attack on the Gay Pride March in Chicago. A resident of San Francisco, I was treated to the spectacle of Sparts collecting donations for a "coalition" against the attack with one hand and hawking their party rag. Workers Vanguard (actually, the SL is more like the backside of the "petty bourgeoisie") with the other. This was simply another disgusting ploy on their part to lure gays and lesbians who are tired of repression, tired of the violence that is committed against us daily and want to express their dissatisfaction in a political fashion, into their reactionary, FBI-sponsored outfit. You can bet that any money they were given went straight into the coffers of the SL. The very content of the leaflet clearly showed their intention to proselytize the SL was the only organization singled out as responsible for building the "coalition," and those interested were instructed to contact it for further information. Little doubt should be left in our minds as to what they hoped to accomplish. We must remain vigilant against those who seek to persuade us that they are our "allies in struggle" in order to dupe us and use our energies to their own perverted ends.

MRS. WILSON, US & "THEM"

★ In response to Mrs. Wilson's letter:

Dear Mrs. Wilson

I read your letter and I am very proud of you. Whatever happened to your son recently happened to me last year, and unfortunately, it happened to many of my friends here in San Francisco

I wrote a letter to Mayor Dianne Feinstein and sent a copy to Chief of Police C. Murphy

They both answered me very promptly, and I received two beautiful letters full of promises!

Obviously, nothing has been done, and it seems to me that the situation is getting worse and worse with

However, I do have a few suggestions:

1. Forget about writing letters to BIG AUTHORI-TIES because they simply do not care at all

2. We must take action as soon as possible

3. The general public must be aware of this terrible

4. Finally, all of us - gay or straight - should march to City Hall and show "THEM" what kind of people we are - and I do hope, dear Mrs. Wilson,

* In spite of the frightening statistics on KS and other Acquired Immune Deficiency diseases, the boys still flock to the baths and bars to pick up who knows what! It would seem that our immediate priority should be to contribute as much as we each personally can to learn more about these dreaded diseases. How about if the One Hundred Thousand Gay Men in the Bay Area spent a little less money looking for sex and this month at least contribute $10.00 to the Cancer Research Center at UC Med. Just think: $1,000,000

Can the bars, baths and other gay businesses also make larger donations? Can we forgo expensive parades, fairs and parties and concentrate on saving

Today and every month I vow to send a $10.00 check to the Cancer Research Center at 400 Parnassus, Rm. A502, SF 94143 until these ailments are better understood. UC Med tells me to indicate on the check that it is to go to the study of KS/AIDS.

Sports are a common ground that everyone can re-late to," said Marcia Veale, the co-coach of the San Francisco women's track and field team. "Gay people are human beings and do 'normal' things too."

The team started training in February and practiced at McAteer High School and SF State. Veale is competing in the shotput, javelin, discus and 100 meter dash events.

"I would like to see the Games open up straight people's minds by letting and respect between the Gay them see that we're not al men's and women's commu 'Dykes on Bikes' or drag nities: open heterosexual queens," Veale said. "Also, eyes to the femininity of Lesthe foreign athletes will be rebians: clear up stereotypes presenting not only themthat Gay people have of each selves but their Gay communother: and enable each athities back home. They'll be lete to leave with a sense of able to tell their Gay friends personal accomplishmentwho couldn't make it what whether they win or lose. happened

The largest number of women (300-400) participating in the Games are playing softball. Slow-pitch A league teams from Boston, Minneapolis, Detroit, Los Angeles, San Francisco and many other cities will be squaring off at Lang Field.

'I think it's healthy for the esbian community to give some emphasis to competition and sports because it's a part of us that isn't given enough recognition." said Rosa Perez. the managercoach of the San Francisco women's softball team.

"Our self-esteem is at large. I want the straight community to see that Gays are a mixed community; we're not just into bars and cruising. I want them to see the support that exists in the Gay community," Perez commented. A woman who trained at the Woman's Training Center for 2-3 hours each day is New Yorker Anita Orlando. She will be in the lightweight physique competition.

"The judges will be looking at muscle tone, poise, flexibility, movement and entire body symmetry," explained

The Games' flag colors (blue, grey, black and white) will be presented at Opening and Closing Day Ceremonies by six women and nineteen men who make up the Flag Corps. The Games are "a tremendous undertaking that will make history," according to Chula Camp, the Flag Corps director. Camp is a straight woman who has "come out of the closet" to support Gays.

"I grew up in a Mexican family, so I know what it's like to be discriminated against, Camp said. "I feel the Games are an excellent vehicle for my time and energy, even though I feel like burnt toast sometimes. This is definitely one of the more memorable years of my life.

Camp has been working with the Gay community for ten years. She is a member of the Women's Outreach Committee and a women's bowling league. Her husband is very supportive and is also involved in the Gay commu-

"I'd like to see the day when people can be themselves in public," commented Camp. "I would also like to see more straight people get involved the the Gay commu nity. I was born in San Francisco, and I want to see the two communities come together before I die!"

The woman who carried the symbolic prelude to the Games across the Golden Gate Bridge will also be representing the San Francisco Track Club in the 1500 meter and five kilometer races.

"I feel that Gay rights are synonymous with human and civil rights in the respect that any consenting adults should have the right to sexual choice," said Sue Walker. who ran with the torch on the final leg of its journey from Vista Point to Marina Green.

Walker has competed for the past five years in Southern California. Santa Monica and San Francisco. She began training for the Games in March at SF State. in other areas near her neighborhood, and in selected sites in the Bay Area.

"I think the women's movement is being swept under the rug: it's become history. Walker said. "A lot of women are falling back into the old schools of thought. I feel that an egalitarian society is pos sible, but it'll take a lot of ef fort and time to achieve it.

"I'd like to see the Games inspire Gay people to participate in any sports or activities they choose, whether competitive or not," concluded Walker.

With women like these representing the Lesbian community in the Games, how can our dreams die?

Job Scam Snares 20 Gays

Alaskan 'Tycoon' Dupes Desperate Job Seekers

A very intelligent and persuasive 23-year-old man by the name of David Jackson ("DJ") Garrett fooled an employment agency, 20 new "employees," and at least one major computer firm into believing that he was very wealthy and was starting up a new real estate holding Garrett, whose whereabouts are currently unknown, hired 20 people through a Castro employment agency called the Book of Jobs, which is affiliated with the International David Society, which, among other things, attempts to help Gays locate jobs. Garrett told the agency that he was inheriting a fortune from his dead mother and grandmother. He said the money was temporarily tied up in litigation in Alaska, but would be released soon. In the meantime, he wanted to start scouting out employees for a new company he was starting, Sierra-Western Corporation.

Over a period of two weeks, Garrett interviewed close to 40 job seekers. All were professionals of one type or another, such as accountants, computer programmers, and the telecommunications specialists. Garrett's empire was going to be far-flung.

Depending on who you talk to, Garrett had various plans. He was going to own ships, hotels, resorts, and other miscellaneous real estate. But no bars, baths or sex clubs, according to one former employee.

Garrett was aided in his day-to-day dealing by an executive director named Ed-Beauchamp, who ward worked for him the longest. Beauchamp was hired on in April and worked without pay until the entire fantasy dissolved a couple of weeks ago. The others only worked a

According to the ex-employees, most were leary of Garrett from the start, but as each new person was hired, they "lent legitimacy" to the whole affair.

A case in point was the purchase of a $4 million computer system. The salesman at Corporation Burroughs thought Garrett was a crazy from the start, according to computer specialist Tom Stama. But after Stama was hired and he accompanied Garrett to Burrough's offices, the deal seemed more legiti mate. Enough so, that Burroughs spent time and money on a master plan two inches

"I know I was a fool," said Stama, "but there was always the chance he was telling the

Everything began to fall apart when it came time to pay for things, like rent on office space, the computers, and the payroll.

At first Garrett made excuses about the money still being tied up in Alaska. Then he said he was going up there to see if he could do anything. Then he just disappeared.

He's been seen since on the street and in the Locker Room Bookstore on Polk by a couple of former employees. He had a story to tell when he was confronted. They didn't believe him.

No dollar amount has been attached to it because an itemized list of assets has yet to be filed, according to a spokeswoman in the Probate Court office.

The grandmother's legacy is more mysterious. If Garrett divulges anything about the nature of it, he will be cut out of it, according to Beau-

Garrett's father is also very wealthy, Beauchamp said, and is involved in a multimillion dollar development project in Mexico. Beauchamp said Garrett will probably be going down to see his father soon, and he has promised to send a check to cover all the salaries that are due his former employees.

The Book of Jobs has learned a lesson from this experience. Their service will no longer do business with employers unless they have a verifiable office and phone. "Obviously, we'll be more careful in the future, but we're not going to do a dun & Bradstreet check on everyone," said Book of Jobs spokesman Brian Platler.

A number of Sierra-Western alumni have since been interviewed for other jobs through the Book of Jobs, according to Platler.

Man Burned in Russian River Fire

Patrick Burell, an employee at the Rainbow Cattle Company in the Russian River area, suffered second degree burns over twelve percent of his body in a fire a week ago at the Russian River Lodge. Reports indicate he was asleep in his room at the lodge when the fire broke out early Thursday at 2:13 AM. Burrell, sleeping nude, opened the door of his room and was hit with a wall of fire. He turned and jumped out of his second story room.

He is currently recovering at the burn center located in St. Francis Hospital in San Francisco. He is expected to be in the hospital for several weeks.

The fire apparently broke out in the office of the Russian River Lodge when a couch caught on fire. According to owner Jim French, the fire was limited to a few rooms on the second floor. French said are still closed, there was no extensive damage.

He declined to discuss the cause of the fire stating it was premature and he would await the outcome of the fire department and the sheriff's department report. There is reason to believe the cause is arson. Jim French emphasized that there was no interruption in the operation of the Russian River Lodge and that all facilities are currently in

"In contrast," Van Heusden continued, "Milton Marks has been at the forefront of the struggle for Gay rights in California. The Gay community could make no better decision than to send Milton Marks to Congress.'

POLITICS AND POKER

So much has either been written or will be written about the Gay Games Opening Day ceremonies that there is little I can add except to say that like 10,000 of my Gay brothers and sisters I attended last Saturday's Kezar Stadium even. And I want those responsible for organizing this truly incredible event to know that I have been Gay for 25 years, and and out-of-the-closet for the past ten years, but never have I been as proud to be a Gay man as I was Saturday while watching those beautiful athletes file onto the field. The only event in my memory that even comes close was election night in 1977 when Harvey Milk was elected to the Board of Supervisors.

You had to have been there Saturday to understand the feeling because to describe the feeling of pride would never work. Everything seemed to go off well - the athletes were beautiful, the entertainment was superb (I mean, do you believe Tina Turner at age 52? — the best!) the speeches were surprisingly few - and short; and after some coaxing, the sun even cooperated. Even the Reverend Troy Perry's crude plug for the 1984 Olympic Games scheduled for his beloved Los Angeles nearly went unnoticed (save for a couple of startled Gay Games board members) - and after all the shit the U.S.O.C. people gave Tom Waddell and his volunteers in the past few months!

Yes, Virginia, I know it isn't smart to publicly criticize the Pope, but just because Rita Mae thinks Perry "walks on water" doesn't mean we all do. And better yet - the Games Committee promises that this Sunday's closing ceremonies will be even more exciting — hardly imaginable. but then if anyone can pull it off, I am now convinced Dr. Waddell and Company can. I stood in the stands with Perry Watson, a bartender friend of mine from the New Bell, and applauded wildly for 30 minutes while the athletes kept coming on to the field and many of those around us had tears in their eyes and all had smiles on their faces. The entire afternoon was really dynamite - simply beautiful Congratulations to Tom Waddell, Mark Brown, David Bandy, Zohn Artman, Allan Johnson, Hydie Downard, Bob Ross, Glenne McIlhinney, Charlotte Coleman, Richard Leonard, and the dozens of others whose names I have missed as well as all the others who have worked for the better part of the past two years to make these first Gay Athletic Games possible.

The League of Women's Voters will sponsor two nationally televised debates this year between the GOP and Demo congressional leaders: the first to be from D.C. on Oct. 5 will deal with foreign policy and national security issues and the second scheduled for Oct. 19, also from D.C., will center on economic issues... Gay political consultant Jim Rivaldo (Rivaldo, Pabich & Friends) was in New Mexico last week where he met with Pollster and Harvard classmate Pat Caddell and New Mexico Democratic gubernatorial nominee, Toney Anaya. Rivaldo wrote and designed Anay as campaign literature for the June primary and will do so for the November general election (Anaya enjoys a comfortable lead in most polls in that state).

In N.Y., Mayor Ed Koch, seeking the Demo nomination for Governor, has received the endorsement of the influential Lambda Independent Demo Club for Brooklyn, N.Y.'s largest Gay club. The endorsement was apparently given in part, at least, because Koch's oppon-ent, Lt. Governor Mario Cuomo's supporters have once again tried to smear the bachelor Mayor ("Vote for Cuomo, Not the Homo") in a televised debate from upstate New York, the anti-hosexual crap against Kock became so intense that he was asked point-blank whether he was a homosexual and the Mayor replied emphatically "No, I am not." The primary election is later this month with Koch still the favorite.

Writing in the weekend edi-

Pushing his return-the-surplus-to-the- taxpayers plan, Kopp chides the Mayor and the Chamber of Commerce for opposing his plan, saying that "neither of them evidently understand that basic levels of heat, electricity and water are necessities of life and, like food, should be tax-exempt. Cesar Chavez's United Farm Workers Union endorsed Jerry Brown for U.S. Senator this week, but ignored the Bradley for Governor effort. The UFW endorsed all Democrats for statewide office except Bradley and Lt. Governor nominee Leo McCarthy. The California Court of Appeal ruled as unconstitutional a San Jose city ordinance against loitering for the purpose of soliciting acts of prostitution. The court ruled that the San Jose law "leaves enforcement to subjective and potentially arbitrary evaluation of law enforcement." The court also noted that the San Jose ordinance attempts to regulate sexual conduct which the court said can be regulated by state law only..

You think it doesn't cost money to run for Congress? As of June 30, a week before the June 8 primary election, 6th congressional candidate Barbara Boxer had collected $237,236, and she still ended up far in debt. What, pray tell, will the November election bring and where will it all stop?... And, in Nevada, 5term Demo Senator Howard Cannon is in the fight of his political life because of the big bucks the National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC) has poured into the campaign of his primary opponent, Congressman James Santini. That election is next week, and Santini is now considered at least even

Sexual Freedom vs Romance Aired

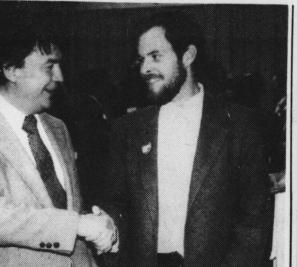

What so many discussions of Gay sexuality have missed is that there is no necessary connection between sexual freedom and emotional commitment, that the idea of monogamy and love are quite distinct and are only confused because of certain social pressures.... But I have no regrets about my life so far. Being Gay seems the most natural thing to do, and a person can make his life anything he wants it to be. Perhaps there is less guilt about being Gay, but I still couldn't go arm in arm down the street with another guy. I've never let it all hang out as some do today. A friend of mine suggested that I should include more news clips on the technological side of life down here.

"Please," I scoffed, "feel free to send news clips yourself to the "Northern California Electronic News," (a straight publication serving the local industry). I'm only interested in material relative to the Gay Community." I was convinced that the two (high tech and Gay community) did not stand on that much common ground.

Well, I stand corrected Last week at the Desperados there it was, Silicon Valley's answer to the handkerchief color code - the color-coded pin-light collar clip (your choice. The current battle with the San Jose Police Department's expensive policy of (alleged entrapment) arrests of bookstore patrons seems to represent the kind of blatant harrassment of Gays and wouldbe Gays that appears to be on the upswing across the country now that our current leadership is re-indulging us all in the narrow mentality of the fifties.

Detroit Girl Makes Life Sparkle

Lonette McKee Plays Fated Woman and Wills Herself Feted

by John F. Karr

So what is Lonette McKee doing on the front page of the Entertainment section when you've never heard of her? Because, as her bio in the program for Showboat explains, she enjoys a cult following, largely for her role of Sister in the movie Sparkle and next for her praised portrayal of Julie "Can't Help Lovin' That Man" LaVerne in the Houston Grand Opera production of Showboat now at the Orpheum Theatre.

Sparkle is the cult movie-musical about a group of Harlem kids in the late 1950s who form a singing group to become rich and famous. The movie was abandoned by the studio, although praised by Pauline Kael and Vincent Canby and loved by the few who managed to see it. Aretha Franklin made a record of its wonderful Curtis Mayfield songs. As the good-time girl who chooses the wrong guy in her shot at the fast life, Lonette McKee stole the first two-thirds of the movie. She got the role that put her on the map through talent, luck and motivation.

Despite the beauty of figure, face, and voice that has made her the recipient of favorable and frequent comparisons to Lena Horne, Lonette's greatest asset at this stage of the game may be when she said she was a Detroit native, I jokingly assumed she was raised singing in a Baptist Church. But she set me straight.

"I never sang in church!" she said. "I was raised a Roman Catholic, and they didn't sing. I went to a parochial school, much to my dismay, and dropped out when I was

"At seventeen my zest for show business came back and I drove through a blizzard to Chicago to audition to be on the Dean Martin Show."

She didn't get the role, but the producer liked and remembered her, and she soon was appearing as a "Soul Sister" on the Jonathan Winters Show in Hollywood. She recorded an album and signed with the prestigious Nina Blanchard Modeling BAY AREA REPORTER SEPT. 2, 1982 PAGE 20

It was Sparkle, of course, and it was Lonette's motivation that took her through a storm to Chicago and led to the movie. Irene Cara played Sparkle, and Dreamgirls tells much the same story, but neither's success has led to the movie's re-release. Lonette made Sparkle in 1976 when she was 21. "I made up the character of Sister from girls I had known in Detroit, friends of my older sisters. You know, fast bad girls.'

Lonette played opposite Richard Pryor in Which Way Is Up, and in Cuba with Sean Connery. She made a pop album for Warner Brothers and then found herself, at the end of 1981, in her first stage role. She was Mrs. Jackie Robinson in a musical called The First about baseball's pioneering Black player. Although it flopped, Lonette received only praise. She found she liked live theatre and appeared in Ladies In Waiting in Chicago, a musical concerning a day in the life of nine waitresses in a Midwestern greasy spoon. "Chicago wasn't ready for

by Polly Sargeant

Although she was born Lillian Klot, an absent-minded announcer dubbed her with the name of the song she was going to sing and Lillian became famous as Georgia Brown. Her vigorous acting and lusty singing as Nancy in Oliver! put her at the top of musical comedy stardom, but since then she's been far too absent to please her fans. Nonsinging stars took over the musical comedy stage and people asked "Where's Georgia?"

She worked in London and holed up in Hollywood, producing a limited quantity of higher quality work. She returned to the American musical stage several seasons ago with Carmelina, which didn't last long. But now she's securely back with a special one-woman show she's written Georgia Brown and Friends has just opened at the Curran Theatre. In it, Georgia has combined twenty songs, poetry and her own gutsy humor in what she calls 'a candid look at my life and the people who have shared In 1981 Georgia won a Los Angeles Drama Critics Circle Award for "Distinguished Performance" for this production.

Georgia spoke about her show to the local press recentand demonstrated her forthright snap. When one man questioned, "Just how spicy is your candid show?" Georgia joked, "I never take my clothes off," but then gave pause by asking, "Why should 'candid' be seamy or spicy?

"You find me right on stage," she said, explaining her brand of candidness. "My show is all real. By the time you've reached the age I'm at - I'll be 49 the day we open in New York in October you've experienced quite a bit. I can relay that in my

"Unlike Lena Horne's My Life In Music, my show is a play, not a musical revue. One half of it is spoken. Audiences feel they know me after the show.

But that doesn't mean that there isn't a hefty dose of music in the show, from the Cockney songs she heard in her childhood, to a tribute to British music hall star Marie Lloyd. "She was a great vulgarian," said Georgia, "yet with a political conscious-

Also included are tunes from Oliver!, Stephen Sondheim, and, of course, the Brecht-Weill canon which was Georgia's introduction to the theatre. Georgia explained that her exposure to Brecht and Weill taught her to seek material that had a text as well as music.

Georgia's artistic projects frequently reflect this need to say something as well as entertain. For British television she created, produced, and starred as Annie Kenny in Shoulder to Shoulder, a dramatic series on the history of the British women's movement. Third Women's Music Festival on September 23-26th, approximately 4000 women will gather at a 2200 acre private camp near Willits, California, for four days of music, theater, workshops and politically related activities. The Third Annual West Coast Women's Music Festival, a remarkable event which reflects the organizing abilities of literally hundreds of women who build and sustain a city in the woods, is looking bigger and better than ever.

Looking Fine with Old Problems Resolved

by Sue Zemel

"The festival provides a safe place for women to celebrate our culture, network, refuel ourselves, and have fun," stated Producer Robin Tyler, who has her hands full attending to countless details as the festival moves into its

Last year Tyler came under fire from some women who charged that the festival was racist. As many of these allegations proved unfounded, this year several women of color are participating in the festival in a variety of capacities. There will be parity on stage, as well as in the hiring of coordinators, a policy also incorporated at last year's event. Two of the festival's staff are women of color, and according to Bernice Lee, one of these organizers, a suggestion made by women who attended a Califia retreat for Third World women — to designate a special camping area for women of color, their lovers, and friends - will be put into effect.

Several other improvements have been made since last year. Tyler has hired the women who cook at the Michigan Women's Music Festival, and they will provide two meals a day to participants. "From what everyone who has gone to Michigan says, the food is great," noted Bernice Lee, who explained that the women cook outdoors in huge pits. Participants can bring in Coleman stoves (propane only) to make coffee and tea, and a limited number of stoves will be available to women who do not own their own.

The festival land is totally private, which will eliminate some of the hassles encountered last year at Camp Mather, which had a public road running through it. "It was tremendously difficult to get a camp this year," said Tyler. "We had to find a large enough camp that was willing to rent to 4000 women, let alone many of us being Les-Ironically. managed to rent a camp 21/2 hours north of San Francisco from the Boy Scouts. women performers will appear on the festival's main stage. Bay Area musicians Margie Adam, Meg Christian, Sylvia Kohan, the Alberta Jackson Band, Orquestra Sabrosita, and the Bay Area Women's Philharmonic, as well as East Coast performers Edwina Lee Tyler and A Piece of the World, Deuce, The Harp Band, Kay Gardner, Carol MacDonald and Isis, and Ibis, with Mary Watkins sitting in are scheduled to perform. "We've gotten some of the hottest acts who have appeared at Michigan," Tyler

Fat Lip Readers Theater, and Mothertongue Reader's Theater, and a handful of comics will appear on the festival day stage, which will also have an open mike policy and lottery system, as well as some scheduled performances.

The festival this year is not sponsoring workshops: however, women have been encouraged to facilitate their own workshops throughout the festival on a variety of topics. A daily schedule will be posted with workshop times and locations. A special networking tent will be set up for women to connect with each other, share information about their organizations, and do coalition building.

Another addition will be a 24-hour Alcoholics Anonymous tent that will be set up and staffed by the Women's Alcohol Coalition in Los Angeles. According to Tyler. there will also be a "rumor control" tent, where women can get accurate information about issues that emerge at the festival.

Camp Tell Me A Riddle, a structured childcare environment for girls under 12 and boys 10 and under, will once again be operating throughout the festival. The Youth Corp, a program which enables younger women to work as apprentices to festival coordinators, will also be

As in past years, the festival accessible to disabled women, with concerts interpreted for the hearing impaired. A shuttle bus will be available to transport disabled women around the perimeter of the lake. Around the lake special camping areas will be established for disabled women, women of color, their friends, and lovers, older women, women-only, and chemically free women. Also there will be an area for craftswomen to display their wares, and for concessions.

Since the festival coincides with the Jewish holidays, Yom Kippur services will be held on Sunday evening, September 26th. Jewish women, their friends and lovers are invited to stay on the land for a Monday evening break-fast. A Fall Equinox Celebration is also planned for Thursday night, September 23rd.

on a sliding scale for $80-$100, with limited weekend passes (Friday and Saturday) available for $60-$75. Workexchange is also available for women who have made appropriate arrangements prior creased camp rental costs account for the price increase.

"Last year we paid year's event.

As Tyler concluded, it is becoming increasingly difficult to hold events the magnitude of the upcoming festival. But for the time being, it's fullsteam ahead, as the forever ringing telephone at the festival's Valencia Street office indicates. "I always wanted to work for A.C.T.," he reveals. "I knocked on their door. I came down from Ashland (where he spend three seasons at the Oregon Shakespearean Festival)... but I wasn't willing to go through their apprenticeship program - I'd already been to school.

The luncheon is also a time for us to catch up on Blankfield who went to L.A. with Bullshot and has been there ever since. An ABC special, The Low Moan Spectacular led to his becoming part of the Fridays company, which has occupied most of the last four years. During one hiatus he played a supporting role in The Incredible Shrinking Woman with Lily Tomlin and a gorilla played by Rick "King Kong" Baker. He says that movie "should be studied as an example of how everything can go wrong.

In a masterpiece of timing Blankfield signed a contract for his first starring film, Jekyll Hyde...

Again, on a Friday afternoon. The following Monday morning ABC renewed "Fridays" for another season. "If I hadn't signed the contract on Friday ABC wouldn't have let me do the movie." he says.

His last two weeks on the movie coincided with his first two back at "Fridays," and he worked long but invigorating days - 6 AM to 6 PM on Jekyll and Hyde, 7:30 to midnight at the tv studio. Rather than being exhausted, he found that the variety of work game him "more vitali-

Lola

Life in the Fass Lane

Prolific Gay filmmaker Rainer Werner Fassbinder died leaving three films awaiting American release. The first of these, Lola is a fable about the corruption of the last good man in Germany.

Bohm (Armin Mueller-Stahl) is the new building commissioner in a small German town in the late 50's. As if his purity didn't shine through his every word deed. American audiences have an edge in recognizing it because the actor a ringer for Walter Cronkite.

Liza got out of the cabaret just in time, because 20 years later it's a full-fledged whorehouse where customers can be part of the entertainment if they're too lazy to go upstairs for sex. But it's all rather joyless with none of the spark of the pre-war cabaret; it's just the place the town's officials go to unwind after a busy day of graft and corruption.

You should spot some contemporary parallels, especialwhen Reagan's "trickle down" theory is espoused, but the director was just taking an ironic look at how Germany was rebuilt after the war. He had an ambivalent attitude toward the material. obviously making some serious points yet distancing the almost surreal plot from reality with the use of colored fantasy lighting throughout. "Since the time Father Zeus took handsome Ganymede as his eromenos to serve as his cupbearer on Mount Olympus. the ritual of finding a lover has been governed by custom. The approach is made by the older man, the erastes. If he finds you interesting he will try to draw you aside in conversation: getting that far he may brush your face with his fingertips or touch your genitals and then give you the traditional love gift: a cockerel, a hare, a quail, a dog, a horse, even a stag, all leading to a romantic involvement.

Historical novels are probably the greatest challenge in literature. But they possess unique dangers. A good deal of detailed research should be performed by the author because there is an almost overwhelming temptation to project our own desires onto characters from the past. History should happen the way we want it to happen, we think. Historical revision makes a strong wine to drink. This is especially hazardous territory for Gay writers. We have all been informed about the bisexual tendencies of the ancient Greeks and how the well-oiled, strong young men were fond of each other. Naturally, we want a narrative to reflect this truth in a rather obvious fashion Unfortunately, reality doth intrude. Greek males were expected to marry and rear children. Yes, they were Gay voung blades but family duty came first. We don't know all there is to know about those golden days, so an author is tempted to fill in the gaps with an overflowing imagination.

Mr. Harrison does the best he can with what he has. He is not Mary Renault or Marguerite Yourcenar creating The Memoirs of Hadrian. His chronology of the ancient times is chiefly Hollywood Gothic in tone with characters speaking as though they were the Bowery Boys on a lark. Some of the fine details may not always bear close scrutiny. (Example: In one athletic training scene the boxers are using punching bags. We can only speculate as to whether such equipment was utilized in those times.)

Harrison has managed to pull together a reasonably eye-catching adventure with lots of gore and fast action Pantarkes is a handsome, sixteen year old Greek lad who longs to make good in the Olympics and any other contest he can enter. Unfortunately, in one encounter (he is a wrestler) he kills the son of a prominent citizen and is forced to flee Sparta for his life. He wanders about for two years and is embroiled in

The first seventy pages of this grand vision of human folly and fervor are rather slow and confusing, but after that the roller coaster of Toomey's memories takes off and the reader keeps running breathlessly after him. The pages take forever to run out, but we hardly notice.

On August 25th, the 1982 TGWNBL Summer season took its place among the past great bowling seasons. It seemed to be a bit more special than most of its predecessors, though. For example, during its span, its members bowled a total of 349 200 + games, supported by no less than 23 600+ series. And, bizarre as it may the record high number of 200 + games was established on the last evening of bowling. The following 24 champions certainly deserve a gesture of respect when you find yourself in their presence next.

FINAL TEAM STANDINGS

In the four season's-high categories, Keith Ray copped the H.S.G. position with an amazing 257; Aubrey Palmer dominated the H.S.S. ranking with his soaring 691 series; Jack Mitchell seized the H.H.G. listing with a towering 284 handicap game; and finally, Aubrey Palmer captured the H.H.S. top spot with a fantastic 736. Far more than exceptional.

World Series Begins

The tournament is underway and the competition is very keen. By the time you read this, we will be into the quarter finals and we have seen nothing but excellent softball. The social events have been fun, also, and, judging from the players' reactions, they are partying as WHAT A FESTIVE BUNCH! These festivities will climax this Saturday (4) with the championship games at Balboa Park (Ocean and San Jose Aves.) beginning at 10:30 AM. The evening will conclude with the SERIES VI

BANQUET, where we will present the Champions and be well fed and entertained. During that evening we will also draw the winning truck raffle ticket.

San Francisco is being wellrepresented by the PENDU-LUM PIRATES — probably the best team we have ever fielded for a World Series. But they are pitted against some stiff competition. First to arrive was the GAY 90's team from Twin Cities, followed by the PHARR LIBRARY from Atlanta, THE PUB from New Haven, and the CHAPS team from Boston. Also in town to

SALLY'S from Houston (a raucous group!), GRIFF'S from Los Angeles (the defending champs), THE EAGLE of New York, WRECK ROOM of Milwaukee, ANNEX 2 from Chicago and the EAST SIDE RAID ERS from Toronto. They all have excellent teams and will do their best to break up Los Angeles' near-monopoly of the championship title. They will also have to outplay a hard-charging Pendulum team. Come out to the field, have lunch (good food will be available) and see some excellent athletes playing top-

HOT KNIGHTS. SUMMER KNIGHTS

Steamy . . . that's the way you think of it. The men . all hot fuckers, the kind one dreams about, jacks off to. The Hothouse's Third Anniversary Party last Friday was one of those nights. It wasn't just S&S (Stand & Stare) as the Hothouse can be at times, but hot and friendly. Louis Gaspar, HH owner, manned the DJ booth himself; Greg Smith and Tony Medrano checked us in to champagne and decor by "Wilkes Bashford" himself. Managers Gene Larimy and Tony Davis were the perfect hosts, as Ron Dobson kept the energy "flowing." Jim Cvitanich, Mr. SF Leather, celebrated his birthday there, as only a man as swarthy and sleazy can. Sedate little Phil found himself a Daddy in the darkness of the bunk room, with the aid of five heaving hulks, as Dick Collier of Troc fame came by to play and pay his respects. The Folsom Street Hotel's Bill Dubilier held a mighty sweaty court in his room with Jim as the prime beef inspector. You could tell the boat had landed There were athletes "working out" all over the place, getting in shape for the Games the next day. Gary, of the Mr. S. Products cutting room, had a reeeeeeal good time cutting a new swath of intimacy. The huge cake was cut by Tony at 1 AM, which gave us fortification to go on all night. The HOTHOUSE has given the So/M scene a three-year run of Heat and Sweat that none can match . . . and we are grateful to Louis and the gang for their love and innovation

ILLITERATION LINGO

Those men who provide us with printed amusement have been busy. You'll find the firm little controller for Oasis, John Ortis, in Honcho magazine's October issue. The photographer somehow even got the little bastard to smile. In its companion mag, Mandate. Don Beavers has a haunting expose on Marilyn Monroe. John Embry, publisher of SF's Drummer, tells me they are coming out with a first, a special issue devoted to Daddies. It's about time someone gave the revered older men in Leather their turned. Jon Sims, daddy of Gay Marching Bands, has returned to SF after a six month jaunt about the globe. The SF Marching Band turned out in force to give him and the visiting LA Band (here for the Gay Games) a champagne brunch at Leatherman Jerry Campbell's tree house. The patio was filled with tanning bodies. There are some genuine leather inkies in the I A hand who told me that SF wined and dined 'em, then showed 'em what Crisco is really used for.

Later, So/M warmed under the blazing sun as The Stables held the First Annual Cave Memorial Beer Bust. The Sunday crowd, tired and fulfilled after a weekend of fun and funk, eased into an afternoon of congenial chatter. David and Jim of the Catacombs taunted John Twigg and Bob Lee (who will head the Leatherworld staff after its sale to Houston's Joe Cash) as The Drummer Boys, John Embry, Mario Simmon, and their photo star Jim Wigler, basked. Ken and Choux of Complete Bar Supply dis-cussed with Randy West his latest neon project, an animated piece which sounds captivating. We were attended to by Ted Williams, Bob Kovack (of Sleaze Attack album fame) and blond, lean John Scholten. The Daddies were out in force. Rick Demarest and Dan Burnes moved on the unsuspecting revelers.

Quaint and Hot -Quaintance Returns

Although it sounds fictitious, Quaintance is his actual name. George Quaintance. He was born around 1915 in the Blue Mountain Range of Virgina and raised on a farm. An only child, he spent his time doodling. His family, with some foresight, realized he'd never be a farmer and sent him to school in Washington D.C. Another thing they couldn't foresee was that their son George would become the most popular homosexual artist of his time.

Quaintance, a body builder himself, was an exemplar of the "manly" style, in an era when the demarcation between Gay and straight looks wasn't pronounced. Quaintance desired the homosexuality of his paintings to be inferred; it was never explicit. He'd like us to believe these are straight men, in relaxed of close noments camaraderie. That's one of the oldest homosexual fantasies, and contributes heavily to the frequently quaint eroticism of the paintings. The use of cowboys and themes of the West seem archetypically Gay, but were trendsetting when Quaintance used them. He recog-

Gay Games Wind Up

As one who had a "deep and abiding fear of recess, MC Armistead Maupin, commencing closing ceremonies, applauded "the fags of all nations, sissies and bull dykes and plain old garden variety queers" who had made up the Gay Games. He urged we "stop apologizing to our op-pressors and get to the business of living our lives."

In 1978 Larry Berner, a second-grade teacher in the 500 pupil Fitch Mountain school came out of the closet to work against Brigg's Proposition 6. Prop 6 would have removed

Gays from the classroom. The then 38-year-old school teacher was drawn into the battle's spotlight when a Santa
