INFORMATION FOR AUTHORS

The Kroeber Anthropological Society Papers publish articles in the general field of anthropology, including those which it is difficult, for various reasons, to publish elsewhere. In addition to articles of theoretical interest, the Papers will welcome descriptive studies putting factual information on record, as well as bibliographies, linguistic texts, vocabularies, and historical documents of anthropological interest. The Society is particularly anxious to publish student research papers of high quality.

Manuscripts must be typewritten, double spaced on good quality 8 1/2 by 11 inch paper, and on one side of the page only. Endnotes (the Papers do not employ footnotes) and bibliography should likewise be typewritten, double spaced throughout, and on one side of the page only. The endnotes and bibliography should be placed on separate sheets. The bibliographic style to be followed is that used in this number of the Papers. A style sheet containing further information concerning manuscripts and bibliographic style may be obtained from the Society upon request.
Authors will receive three copies of the issue of the Papers in which their contribution appears. Reprints may be ordered at the price of one cent per page. A small extra charge will be made if illustrations must be reproduced by photolithography. When notified of the acceptance of their manuscript, authors will be asked how many reprints they desire.

Manuscripts should be addressed to:

Holders of class 1 and 2 subscriptions pay a subscription fee of three dollars per annum. Holders of a class 3 subscription (two individuals receiving a joint copy, but casting one ballot each) pay four dollars per annum. Holders of class 1 and 4 subscriptions have one vote. The table of contents of this issue of the Kroeber Papers contains several familiar names, as well as a few unfamiliar ones. Oscar Núñez del Prado is professor of anthropology in the National University of Cuzco, and his article on Andean native life appeared originally in Spanish in the Revista Universitaria. A translation of this article is published here in the belief that it deserves a wider audience than it is likely to have had in its original form.

Esther Matteson, the author of the second article in this issue, is well known to readers of the Papers for her contributions to our knowledge of Piro culture and language. Her analysis of a Piro text is a valuable supplement to her paper on Piro phonemes and morphology which appeared in Number 11.

The three succeeding articles are by members of the faculty at the University of California. Robert F. Heizer analyzes several documents which expand our knowledge of California Indians in the historic period. John Howland Rowe points up a number of important problems which are pertinent in ethnographic work, while Edward Norbeck presents several fascinating parallels between myths found among the tribes of northern South America and the Philippines, and suggests an explanation for these parallels.

Arnold R. Pilling, the author of the last paper in this issue, is a graduate student at the University of California. His discussion of the archaeology of the Monterey Coast is the first comprehensive treatment of this area to be published.

The relatively small amount of space allotted to work by graduate students in this issue should not be taken as an indication of a change in editorial policy. In fact, graduate students are especially urged to submit manuscripts for the forthcoming issues.
