It Could Be

By Lawrence Spears

Charges of police brutality and secreting a witness marked the trial of Charles Christman, which ended in a hung jury shortly before midnight March 5. Christman is charged with five counts of assault on five separate police officers with a deadly weapon (his automobile). The young man allegedly tried to run down the five officers with his auto during a fracas between police and patrons of the Stud, a gay bar in San Francisco at 1535 Folsom. The incident happened at closing time on December 12, 1970 (January Vector).

Christman, a quiet, intelligent lad with a Quaker background, evidently panicked and tried to get away from the police in his auto. He was shot down by police after he ran from his bullet-riddled auto on foot. He is still on crutches.

Doctors have feared that he may lose part of his right leg. A new trial date is to be set in April. Christman is free under his own recognizance.

UNIFIED We Stand

Gayzette staff is deeply concerned regarding the dissension that continues to run fever high within Gay Society's established forces. It is this paper's desire to attempt to cross the communication gap between opposing groups so that Gay People will forge a head in a united and harmonious atmosphere.

Unfortunately, the Gay individual appears to have little or no voice in matters that deeply affect his welfare and interest.

Homosexual Runs For Congress

Dr. Franklin E. Kameny is openly running for a Congressional seat. This is the first time to our knowledge that an admitted homosexual has openly campaigned for this high office.

Dr. Kameny is 45, a physicist and astronomer. His candidacy is for a Non-voting Delegate to Congress from the District of Columbia. He is campaigning on a platform including sexual civil liberties. It is refreshing to see persons in the Gay Community striving to achieve progress in alleviating sexual oppression.

With his fine record, Dr. Kameny is a valuable asset to all sexually oppressed people, be they straight or Gay.

Inside the small Toyota was a very nervous and scared Charles Christman. Officers had stopped his car suddenly after being ordered to stop and then took off again down Folsom Street. After the second stop, a confused Christman backed the car, bumping an officer behind him who fell to the ground (receiving a minor injury to his ankle) and ran down an alley next to The Stud, chased by Officer William Fox. Christman said, "Halt!" Fox then shot at the panic-stricken young man after Taylor fired a shot into the air.

It was determined that Christman had been wounded in the elbow and back by bullets, in addition to the leg wound by a bolt from a telephone pole. Medical Attorney John Boyer brought the subject to the area's atezoles. It was clear that The Stud was a gay bar, capitalizing on a possible sensitive reaction to the witness for the defense who were to testify. Eventually, he was convicted because he was armed and there were shots fired. The D.A. announced that he would not seek the case conviction. The defense attorney for The Stud.

GAY - AN ISSUE?

Homosexuality did not become an issue in the trial it was underway for the first time. The San Francisco Police Department was one of the six at The Stud, which originally stated that he had been beaten. He said he heard the first shot as the police ordered compliance with the police order to disperse. He said he heard an officer use the word "gay" as they were "orienteers" with shouts of "Kill the cocksucking queers." There was sort of a confrontation. There was a lot of police gunfire at The Stud.
