Four years after the infamous veto by Mayor Feinstein, domestic partners legislation still languishes on the back burner at San Francisco City Hall. The legislation, which would grant legal recognition to lesbian and gay couples by setting up a registry, and extend health benefits to city employees and their lovers, has not been re-introduced to the Board of Supervisors by its original sponsor, Supervisor Harry Britt, in those intervening years. Now, with a new Board in place, the necessary votes to pass the legislation exist. But are there enough votes to override another veto? And where's the legislation to call the question?

DOMESTIC PARTNERS

F or years, the efforts of local lesbians and gays who want domestic partners legislation have been stymied. The Board of Supervisors, dominated by straight politicians, has consistently blocked any attempt to enact such a program. Now, a change in city leadership is bringing new hope for these long-term activists.

"I don't want to reintroduce it and lose it. I do a lot of groundwork and I know that it's a good idea, but I feel that you have to win it. I'd rather not go into it if it won't be introduced, it's been dismissed a few months ago," says Britt. "I want to do it the right way and not just have it dismissed because it didn't have the votes to get passed."

According to Supervisor Carol Ruth Silver, there has been an increase in the pressure for the abuse of health benefits by those with close friends or family. The pressure is not coming from them but from those who do not participate in the legislation. It is clear that the legislation needs to be reformed in order to prevent this abuse.

"I don't think the costs are going to be that prohibitive. People always want to have their way, but if there is an answer to everything, and that's not always the case. The same thing happened with thejunior senate override. There was no legislation on the table."

"The pressure from the religious community may have been the final straw, according to Coles. "I think the Mayor understood the rhetoric a lot better than many other politicians. We can't override a ordinance."

"I don't think the costs are going to be that prohibitive. People always want to have their way," says Britt. "I don't think that the costs are going to be that prohibitive. People always want to have their way."

A Report From The SF Dept. of Public Health

LOOKING AHEAD AT THE EPIDEMIC

AIDS was the immediate public health concern of 1984, and when we look back at the past 10 years in medical and social services, and calls for action this time, we feel the urgency of the situation. HIV infection is a serious threat to public health in the United States, and the number of people infected with the virus continues to rise. Although it is still largely unknown, there is a growing consensus that it can be transmitted through sexual contact and blood products. The disease was first recognized in 1981, and since then, it has spread rapidly across the country. As of the end of 1984, it was estimated that over 2000 people had been infected with the virus, and the number has since increased dramatically. Although the mortality rate of AIDS is high, the disease can be treated with antiviral medications, and some patients have lived for years with the illness. However, the cost of treatment is high, and the availability of drugs is limited. The government has taken steps to address the problem, such as increasing funding for research and development of new treatments. We are beginning to see some progress, but there is still a long way to go. The key to controlling the epidemic is early detection and treatment. The sooner a person is diagnosed and treated, the better the chances of survival. We urge everyone to take measures to protect themselves, such as using condoms and avoiding needle-sharing. With your help, we can make a difference.

The leading cause of unsafe sex

Excessive use of alcohol or drugs is one of the main causes of unsafe sex, according to two recent research studies (and the personal experience of most gay men). If you’re still having unsafe sex because of alcohol or drugs, you can do something about it. Don’t be embarrassed to ask for help. Lots of men are doing it. Call the AIDS Hotline and talk it over.

It’s not sin; it’s my life

Dear Charlie Church:

I’m writing because I was wondering how AIDS got started. I know that it was caused by a virus that was transmitted through sexual contact. My question is, what is it about the virus that makes it so contagious and how can we prevent it from spreading?

B. Church

Dear B. Church:

AIDS is caused by the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV). This virus attacks the immune system, making it more difficult for the body to fight off infections and diseases. The virus spreads through certain forms of sexual contact, such as anal sex, vaginal sex, and oral sex. To prevent its spread, it’s important to use condoms and avoid sharing needles or other utensils with someone who is infected.

Dear Charlie Church:

I’m interested in learning more about the history of the AIDS epidemic. Can you tell me about the first few years after it was discovered?

K. H. (AIDS activist)

The first cases of AIDS were reported in 1981. Initially, the disease was called "Gay Men’s Kaposi’s Sarcoma and Pneumocystis Carinii" in the U.S. It wasn’t until 1983 that the virus that causes AIDS was discovered and named HIV. During the first few years after the epidemic was discovered, the disease spread rapidly among gay men and injection drug users. The public and government officials were slow to respond to the crisis, and many people were left to fend for themselves. By the end of the 1980s, AIDS had become a full-fledged epidemic, with thousands of new cases being diagnosed each year.

Some people think you can catch AIDS from a glass.

You can't.

Public health officials and AIDS medical experts agree: AIDS is not spread through the air. AIDS is not spread by touching someone. It is not spread by hot tubs. AIDS is not spread through the preparation or serving of food or beverages in restaurants or homes.

The virus that causes AIDS is spread only through sexual intercourse with an infected person, or by contaminated blood entering the bloodstream—such as by sharing drug needles.

Fight the fear with the facts:
863-AIDS
Surprised?

You may be at risk for AIDS and not know it. More than 1400 American women have contracted AIDS and over half of the women who have done so did not know they were at risk. Women, more than men, are at special risk to get AIDS. This is because AIDS is transmitted sexually and women's sexual responses are generally less intense than men's. For this reason, women are often exposed to the AIDS virus in sexual encounters with men who have AIDS.

Q: Which local company has scored round nicaragua and is planning to return again to the sands of the sandinista government? If you said the big bad willy-allan, etc. here are enough answers to leap into the ballet of ballets, as that is the name of the game in the world of ballet. Indeed, the dallas black, with its perfect blend of technique and artistry, is gaining recognition as the best new company on the scene.

A: The dallas black, with its perfect blend of technique and artistry, is gaining recognition as the best new company on the scene. The company, founded in 2002 by co-artistic directors Krissy Keefer and Shawn Eubanks, has quickly established itself as a leader in the world of contemporary ballet. With a core repertory that includes works by choreographers such as Nacho Duato, Mark Morris, and Mark Morris, the dallas black is known for its innovative and dynamic approach to ballet, blending classical technique with modern dance elements.

Krissy Keefer, one of the founding directors of the dallas black, is known for her innovative approach to teaching and choreography. As a former student of the Joffrey Ballet School, she brings a strong foundation in classical training to her work with the company. Her approach to teaching is influenced by her experiences as a dancer with companies such as the Washington Ballet and the Houston Ballet.

The dallas black's repertory is constantly evolving, with new works regularly added to the company's repertoire. The company's commitment to experimentation and innovation is exemplified in their recent collaboration with the dallas black choreographer-in-residence, who created a new work specifically for the company. This work, titled "The Voice," received critical acclaim and was featured in the company's 2013-2014 season.

In addition to their work with the dallas black, both Krissy Keefer and Shawn Eubanks are active in the dance community, serving on the boards of various organizations and serving as judges and mentors for up-and-coming dancers. Their dedication to the art of ballet and their commitment to innovation and creativity make them true leaders in the world of contemporary ballet.
Dinosaurs at the Rhinoceros

There’s a bright new play on the crowded scene. Actually, Sandy Van has been running this small off-Broadway company for some time and is a member of various improvisational groups for years, but this time she’s in a different league. Following the premiere of her one-woman show, she is now at the helm of a new project: the Rhinoceros. The show is hosted for eight additional performances on January 23, 24, 31, 30, February 6, and 7.

Dinosaurs Surviving the Century

In an evening of comedy and theater, Tadlock Bankhead and Ken Hoyt, the two masters of the craft, are back at it again. Ken’s work with the late Joseph Papp and Tadlock’s brilliance as a director make for a night of sheer awesomeness. If you’re looking for anything remotely resembling a traditional play, think again. The event is a celebration of the intersection between theater and art, and you will not be disappointed.
