Letters to Barbara Rosentum

Dear Barbara,

I just wanted to tell you how much I enjoyed your "Let's Live with Cancer." As a nurse of breast cancer since 1982 (when I was 26), I shared your rage and your sense of humor, and I was quite moved. Thank you for your honest, heart-felt writing. You have given the cancer community a much needed gift.

With love,

Activists Hit the Roof: Burlangame Cops Hit the Ceiling, Arrest 19

One male arrestee got the giggles as his arresting officer made the final arrest. The activist responded with raised eyebrows and small, surprised appreciative noises. The officer's face remained expressionless.

Storming the Citadel

The AIDS Action Council demonstration was a model of timing, resourcefulness, and passion. The AIDS Action Council (AAC) activists had practiced their strategy of breaking into the Wellcome distribution center parking lot with a very de riguer pat down, the activist responded with the giggles; as his male arresting officer made the final arrest. The activist responded with raised eyebrows and small, surprised appreciative noises. The officer's face remained expressionless.

Streets were blocked outside the Wellcome distribution center parking lot with a very de riguer pat down, the activist responded with the giggles; as his male arresting officer made the final arrest. The first AAC squad reached the face-off. It appeared they had not been informed of the strategy. Two men and women climbers had skittered up the door openings, spewing out a pair of ladders and the de riguer pat down, the activist responded with the giggles; as his male arresting officer made the final arrest. With one voice, our best, one we yelled forward with a sense of purpose.

Our full hour protest ("ACT UP/Fight Back/Fight AIDS") every time a new arrestee joined the van, was to be held on the van door. lettuce was tossed into the van, then, of course, Larry Glover, AIDS activist and person with the giggles; as his male arresting officer made the final arrest. The activist responded with raised eyebrows and small, surprised appreciative noises. The officer's face remained expressionless.

AIDS political activity from across the state is focusing on a February 1988 ballot initiative that would establish a "right to die" law for AIDS-afflicted California residents. The initiative, called "No on 64, Yes on AZT," is modeled after a successful 1986 ballot measure in Oregon. The measure would allow terminally ill patients to refuse medical treatment, including life-sustaining procedures. If approved by 50 percent of voters, the law would take effect immediately.

AIDS activists have been working to raise local awareness and organize opposition to the initiative. "We've been on the defensive," said Bruce Decker, representing more positive alternatives to the public.

"I'm here to raise a lot of hell and get people to go out and vote," said Bruce Decker, who is working with State Representative Steve Morin of San Francisco. "We've been on the defensive," said Decker, representing more positive alternatives to the public.

The organization formed to pass the tax credit and to oppose LaRouche II several months ago. The organization said it was formed to be nonpartisan. "We are nonpartisan," said Bruce Decker, who is working with State Representative Steve Morin of San Francisco. "We've been on the defensive," said Decker, representing more positive alternatives to the public.

"If it becomes an action-taking organization, we will be able to make the case to the public," said Decker. "But if it becomes a. . ."

The organization is organized around two goals: first, to help coordinate the actions of already-active groups; and, second, to help coordinate the actions of already-active groups. Instead, the organization is organized around two goals: first, to help coordinate the actions of already-active groups; and, second, to help coordinate the actions of already-active groups. The other main point of contention came a social networking meeting and the first public one of a new AIDS federation. It will not merely react to threats from others.

"Not only have we shut this place down, we have claimed it as our own," stated one activist. "I'll vote against 64, but damnit, what are you going to do?"

"We have the problem of how to take action -- the role of the new AIDS federation. It will not be subsumed by the statewide Coordinating Committee. The organization differs from the No on 64 campaign in its goals and methods. The organization is organized around two goals: first, to help coordinate the actions of already-active groups; and, second, to help coordinate the actions of already-active groups. AIDS Activists Angered by Irresponsible Coverage

BY TIM KINGSTON

No one can ever expect that sex is a disease-free activity. But what behavior is the safest way to play the game? One year ago, in January 1988 Cosmopolitan is that be­cause both viral transmission and sexual transmission seem safe for HIV. AIDS has every right to believe that women are safe from HIV. Even those who are infected with AIDS have been the only known way that the virus can be transmitted through fluid secretions that will..."

of women with AIDS is still small, but is estimated to be about 4 percent of the total. The number of female AIDS cases is outdated. Currently, 3,727 women have AIDS in the U.S. (CDC 1/18/88), which is about 7 percent of the total HIV cases.

The number of heterosexual cases of AIDS was 1,375, the majority of whom were women. The majority of women with AIDS in the U.S. (CDC 1/18/88) are married or have an established sexual relationship with a man. The number of female AIDS cases is estimated to be about 7 percent of the total.

Gould writes, "...another high risk group..." Gould argues that the "female AIDS cases" based on the CDC March 25 data are broken down by gender, heterosexual cases of AIDS was 1,375, the majority of whom were women. The Feminization of Power Campaign:
An Interview with Founder Eleanor M smear

I N T E R V I E W

On February 7, 1987, Eleanor Smear of New York City led a historic walk-in to the National Organization of Women office. It was the first major action taken by the newly formed Power Campaign, an organization that seeks to increase the number of women in political office, to elect more feminists to office. The campaign at this time?

Power Campaign is a grassroots organization that seeks to increase the number of women in political office. It was founded by Eleanor Smear in 1987 as a response to the need for more representation of women in government. The campaign is focused on electing more feminists to political office to ensure that their voices are heard and their perspectives are included in decision-making processes.

Eleanor Smear is the founder and executive director of the Power Campaign. She has been involved in a number of political and social advocacy groups and is a longtime activist for women's rights and equal representation in government.

The Power Campaign has a number of goals, including:

1. Increasing the number of women in political office
2. Electing more feminists to political office
3. Promoting feminist policies and issues
4. Advocating for women's rights and equal representation in government

The campaign uses a variety of strategies to achieve these goals, including grassroots organizing, community education, and candidates' development programs. It works with women of all ages, backgrounds, and political persuasions to help them get involved in the political process.

The Power Campaign has faced challenges, including resistance from those who oppose the goals of the organization. However, it has also achieved successes, such as electing more women to political office and promoting feminist policies and issues.

The campaign continues to grow and expand, with chapters in many cities across the country. It is one of the most successful and influential feminist organizations in the United States.

In conclusion, the Power Campaign is an important organization that works to increase the number of women in political office and promote feminist policies and issues. It is an example of the power of grassroots activism and the importance of promoting diversity and inclusion in government.
The Full Moon Coffeehouse Rises Again

BY KATE BRANSON

The Bay Area women's community of 15 years ago was engrossed in the gathering known as Full Moon. This was not because we had a Madeline's Tea, or that we drank a glass of wine, but because Full Moon was a place where women could come together in a setting that was different and outside of the normal roles and expectations of women. It was a place where we could express ourselves, share our creativity, and engage in discussions about our lives and experiences.

The Full Moon was a coffeehouse/bookstore, a place for women that was different from the norm. It was not just a place to enjoy coffee, but a place where women could come together and be themselves. It was a space for women to express their creativity, to share their thoughts and ideas, and to celebrate their lives.

One of the reasons why Full Moon was so special was because it was a place where women could come together and support each other. It was a place where women could feel safe and comfortable, and where they could learn from each other. It was a place where women could find strength in numbers, and where they could celebrate their uniqueness.

Full Moon was also a space for women to learn and grow. It was a place where women could develop their skills and talents, and where they could find opportunities to expand their horizons. It was a place where women could learn from each other, and where they could find inspiration in the experiences of others.

In conclusion, Full Moon was a space that was special for women. It was a place where we could come together and support each other, and where we could learn and grow. It was a place where we could express ourselves, and where we could find strength in numbers. It was a space that was different, and one that we will always remember.
As a uranian community, we promote our culture. Bringing together a unified structure goes against our grain. Failure to do so may be suicidal.

The Best Interest of the Child: It's Not So Simple

BY PETRA LIUETRAND

I've been with real delight that I have read the columns and letters in "Currents" regarding the use of anonymous donors in insemination. I have no problem with adoption covering one-out of the child, and have considered some of the pros and cons proposed by both the "pros" and "cons" sides of the issue. However, I have noticed a trend which is to be seen in particular in the issue of what is referred to as "adoptive parents" and "inseminated parents." This is a continuing phenomenon as if they were obscuring the fact that there is a difference between adoption and insemination and that the consent involved in adoption and insemination are different kinds of social acts. When we say "insemination," we are referring to the act of inseminating a woman, that is, to the process of introducing sperm into the female reproductive tract. This act is usually performed by a medical professional, and the woman receiving the sperm is referred to as the recipient. Adoption, on the other hand, is a legal process by which a child is transferred from one person or family to another, often involving the relinquishment of parental rights by the biological parents to the adoptive parents.

There is a large difference between adoption and insemination, and that is the consent involved in adoption and insemination are different kinds of social acts. Phyllis & Del Celebrate 35 Years

On February 14, 1953, Del Martin rode to San Francisco from Seattle, as she did into Phyllis Lyon by Valentine’s Day in her heart but not in her name, separating the two in the Castro in that Irish-Catholic neighborhood in the city. She also budged in the presence of the Kerns when she arrived.

This Valentine’s Day, Phyllis & Del celebrate their 35th anniversary together. Coming Up, along with the rest of San Francisco, extends our best wishes and best wishes for many more!

I'm thinking of having a baby... Should I take the AIDS Antibody Test?

Before you decide, ask yourself these questions—

1. Have I had sex with anyone who used I.V. drugs?
2. Have I used I.V. drugs?
3. Have I had sex with a prostitute or bisexual man?
4. Have I had sex with a person whose needle use or sexual past is unknown?
5. Have I had a blood transfusion between 1978 and 1985?

If you answer "yes" to any of these questions, you and your baby might be at risk for AIDS.

Get the Facts. Then Decide.

Quisbies: No. 4 In an AIDS Cycle

By Dana I. Price

Quisbies is an occasional series of one-act plays presenting five different women who are the mothers of terminally ill children. The five plays are separated by interludes. The five are: ParaVids, The Promise, A Dance of Language: John Am, Luminous, and The Increased Self. The plays are performed by a rotating cast of five women: Joan Mankin as the Eureka, Franca Rame as the Norfolk, Deborah Sussel as Leah, the young bride, Richard Seyd, as Mr. Parsons, and Lauren Qader designed the set, painters of alterations. Each of the five women is the mother of a child who is terminally ill. The play is performed in the form of a series of monologues.

ome three years ago, a movement called "AIDS" was started. It has since become a major force in American society, and has had a profound effect on the way we think about and deal with a variety of issues. The term "AIDS" is derived from the acronym for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, a disease that affects the immune system and is transmitted through sexual contact, parenteral drug use, or blood transfusions. The disease is caused by a retrovirus known as HIV (human immunodeficiency virus) or HIV-1.

The spread of HIV and AIDS has had a profound impact on society, and has been the subject of much discussion and controversy. The disease has affected people of all ages, races, and socioeconomic backgrounds, and has had a significant impact on the way we think about and deal with issues of sexuality, health, and the law. The disease has also raised important questions about the role of government and other institutions in addressing public health concerns.

As a result, more and more people are becoming aware of the need to take action to prevent the spread of HIV and AIDS, and to provide support and care for those affected by the disease. This has led to an increased focus on research into the disease, as well as on the development of new treatments and prevention strategies.

Chicago: A Raunchy Delight

A character in the San Francisco Symphony's current production of Beethoven's "Eroica," performed last week at the War Memorial Opera House, observed, "This is one of those top-40 selections where the conductor does his little dance up front while the orchestra plays, and the maestro and chorus keep up with the beat.

This is not the case with Maestro Muhai Tang," who recently assumed the conducting baton of the San Francisco Symphony and who, in his first appearance last week, "kept us on the edge of our seats, and retuned the listener's attention to the orchestra and the music. He sang the "Eroica" with a lively sense of rhythm, a broad sense of tempo, and an understanding of the music. He is a master of his craft, and his conducting was exceptional in the "Eroica.""}

Bay Area Women's Philharmonic

With last Friday's opening of its 16th season in San Francisco, the Bay Area Women's Philharmonic (BAWP) marks a milestone in its history. Founded in 1980, BAWP is the first all-female orchestra in the United States, and it has since become a model for other women's orchestras around the world. This season, BAWP will celebrate its 16th anniversary with a series of concerts that highlight the achievements of female composers, conductors, and musicians.

The opening concert, "Celebrating Women in Music," featured performances by the San Francisco Chamber Orchestra, the San Francisco Girls' Chorus, and the San Francisco Symphony Youth Orchestra. The program included works by composers such as Florence Price, Alice Park, and Mildred山Marchand. The concert also featured a world premiere of a new work by BAWP's artistic director, Anne Rosenblatt.

The season will continue with a series of concerts that explore the music of different eras, including Baroque, Classical, and Romantic periods. BAWP's concerts will be held at the SFJazz Center, San Francisco's premier venue for classical music, and will feature a variety of performers, including pianists, violinists, and singers.

BAWP's commitment to education and community outreach is also a key part of its mission. The orchestra offers music education programs for students of all ages, including community concerts, master classes, and workshops. BAWP also partners with local schools to bring musical education to underserved communities.

For more information about BAWP's season, visit their website at bayareaorchestra.org.

Dear Randy...

I am honored to present to you a list of the candidates for Emperor and Empress.

The Candidates for Emperor & Empress

- Randy Stair (starting top, clockwise) Patsy ReKline, Lily Street and Vinnie Russell are all in the running for Emperor, and Steve Raucher, Stanley Boyd and Billy Ray are competing for Empress. The Coronation takes place February 20 — be sure to vote!

Guest Column: A Word From Flame

First and foremost, a big THANK YOU to Randy Johnson for asking me to add some content to his column. At first I was concerned about how I would make a connection to the events of the last few months, and then I realized that there was a micro-event in which happens to me that you might be interested. While I was walking down the street, I saw a group of people standing around a big screen, apparently watching a sports game. So I walked up to the screen and asked, "What's going on?" The people looked at me blankly. I tried again, "What's the game about?" They still didn't seem to understand. Finally, one of them said, "Oh, it's the Super Bowl." I was confused. "The Super Bowl? But who's playing?" They explained that it was a game between two football teams, the Dallas Cowboys and the San Francisco 49ers. I was amazed. "But why are they playing?" They told me that it was a tradition every year, a way to decide who the best team is. I was intrigued. "But why do they have to play? Can't they just agree on who wins?" They laughed. "That's the point. They have to play to prove their superiority." I was lost. "But why do they have to prove their superiority? Can't they just play for fun?" They shook their heads. "That's the whole point. It's not about fun; it's about proving their superiority." I was overwhelmed. "But why do they have to prove their superiority? Can't they just agree on who wins?" They smiled. "That's the whole point. It's not about fun; it's about proving their superiority." I was confused. "But why do they have to prove their superiority? Can't they just play for fun?" They laughed. "That's the point. They have to play to prove their superiority."

So, there you have it. Some of you candidates should be aware of this new trend in society. If you don't want to be associated with this trend, you might want to consider dropping out of the race.

The message is going to people, very

Have you ever had a painful injury or accident only to be told at the Emergency Room that your X-Rays didn't show anything? Emergency rooms and urgent care facilities primarily check for such things as complete dislocations, fractures, tumors, or other disease processes. The medical physicians who staff those important facilities are capable doctors, but they are not trained in the location, diagnosis, and treatment of misaligned vertebra that can result in serious complications at a later time. Usually, once fracture and disease have been ruled out at the Emergency Room, you are told “Nothing is wrong,” and usually nothing could be further from the truth. Loss of normal curves in the spine, development of abnormal curves, and small displacements of the spinal bones can result in serious disease complications and at the very least CHRONIC PAIN syndromes for months or even years after the accident. Your body is absolutely dependent on receiving “life-producing nerve supply” to operate and repair itself naturally. Abnormally positioned vertebra can halt those messages from the brain, at the root of the nerve itself.

Chiropractors locate the misalignments in your spine and correct them with precise technique. In this way, nerve flow is restored to the various parts of your body, relieving pain and restoring your ability to function normally. Only a chiropractic spinal adjustment can make this correction ... pain pills cannot ... rest cannot ... heat or ice cannot. How long can you afford to wait to correct the cause of your symptoms? Covering them up can only result in greater problems at a later time. Call Sabin Chiropractic today for a more productive lifestyle tomorrow ... 826-8300 in Noe Valley.
