THE N
EYES OPEN

by Bruce Potts

THE 4TH DISTRICT of the Democratic National Convention has been marked, during the last few weeks, by a fight over representation for the 6th congressional district, which has long been considered the key to the party's success in Kansas City elections.

The Democratic party has traditionally dominated the 6th district, which includes parts of Kansas City's east and northeast sides. However, in recent years, the party's control over the district has been challenged by various groups, including labor unions and community groups.

The fight over representation for the 6th district began in early 1974 when some members of the party's executive committee proposed changes to the district's boundaries, which would have diluted the district's influence in national politics.

The reformers argued that the changes would give the district less influence in national politics and would undermine the party's efforts to attract a wider base of support. The traditionalists countered that the changes were necessary to keep the district's influence intact.

The dispute came to a head in November when the Democratic National Convention met in Kansas City. The convention was held in the Junior High auditorium, where the 6th district caucus was held.

The caucus was attended by a large crowd of party activists, who were eager to have their voices heard. The convention rules allowed for four ballots to be held, with the candidate who received the most votes at the fourth ballot to be nominated.

The four candidates who were nominated in the first round were:

1. Tim Twomey
2. Foster
3. Boyle
4. Alarcon

Tim Twomey, a labor leader, was the frontrunner in the first round, with 224 votes. Foster, a liberal, came in second with 190 votes. Boyle, a conservative, had 175 votes. Alarcon, a Latin American leader, had 148 votes.

On the second ballot, the top four candidates remained in the running, with Twomey leading with 234 votes, Foster with 214, Boyle with 177, and Alarcon with 158.

On the third ballot, the top four candidates were again in the running, with Twomey leading with 244 votes, Foster with 224, Boyle with 178, and Alarcon with 153.

On the fourth ballot, the top four candidates were again in the running, with Twomey leading with 254 votes, Foster with 234, Boyle with 179, and Alarcon with 156.

The final result was:

1. Tim Twomey - 254 votes
2. Foster - 234 votes
3. Boyle - 179 votes
4. Alarcon - 156 votes

The convention nominated Tim Twomey as the representative for the 6th district. However, the fight over representation for the district continued in the months that followed, with both traditionalists and reformers battling to have their voices heard.

Dear Pat,

I am writing to express my disappointment with the recent decision of the Democratic National Convention to nominate Tim Twomey as the representative for the 6th district. I believe that the convention's decision to nominate Twomey was a mistake that will have serious consequences for the party's future.

As you know, the 6th district is a key to the party's success in Kansas City elections. The district has traditionally been dominated by the party's traditionalists, who are committed to maintaining the district's influence in national politics. However, in recent years, the district has been challenged by various groups, including labor unions and community groups.

The fight over representation for the 6th district began in early 1974 when some members of the party's executive committee proposed changes to the district's boundaries, which would have diluted the district's influence in national politics. I believe that the convention's decision to nominate Twomey was a mistake that will have serious consequences for the party's future. I urge the Democratic National Convention to reevaluate its decision and to consider the views of the traditionalists and reformers who have been vocal in their opposition to the nomination of Twomey.

"Oh-oh-oh-oh, there was a man who was speaking to the lady who was in the room with him. She was seated in a chair at the other end of the room, and he was standing next to her. I don't know what he was saying, but she kept looking at him and nodding her head. I tried to overhear what they were talking about, but it was too quiet."

At the KOOL, Richard Mosse, a very good friend of mine, had his birthday party last night. Dick, it takes place every year at the same time, but he was always late. This year, he was even later than usual. I'm not sure if it was the traffic or just his usual tardiness, but he finally showed up around 10:30 PM. We all had a great time, and Dick's birthday cake was delicious."

Aunt Martha was a teetotaler. The family was going to a social gathering where there would be food and drinks. Aunt Martha tried to stop me from going because she thought it was wrong. I was upset and argued with her, but she refused to change her mind. Finally, I decided to go alone and try to have a good time without scaring her.

When we arrived, there was a big crowd and people were drinking and having a good time. I tried to join in and have a good time, but Aunt Martha kept bugging me about what I was doing. It was a tough night and I was glad when it was over.

For the dance, I wore a black dress Del made for me. It was a very simple dress, but it looked nice on me. When I arrived, I was surprised to see that Aunt Martha was there. She was dancing and having a good time. I was happy to see her and we talked for a bit. She gave me some advice about how to behave and what to do. She was a good influence on me and I was glad to have her around.

In body building, one of the primary areas of interest in the development of the chest. What is the chest? It is the body that one must work on the chest from the inside out by redefining the muscle structure of the rib box below. This can mean using barbells on the muscles to develop the chest. The rib box may actually constrict the rib box and impede the chest muscles may actually constrict the rib box and impede the chest.

Over the years it was discovered that the chest structure, being largely cartilage, could be permanently damaged and released, even if the chest was not developed. The most effective method of developing this area is to develop the chest structure by using barbells on the muscles. This exercise is performed supine to stretch the rib box greatly.

That is with heavy leg and back exercise encouraged, and the best way to do that is with heavy leg and back exercise such as squats and "cheet" lifts. If you have any doubts, immediately follow it by a series of pullovers to stretch the rib box. The exercise is performed supine on a bench with very light weights, either barbells or dumbbells, held at the head until a full stretch is had, on a bench with very light weight, either barbells or dumbbells, held at the head until a full stretch is had.

A great thank you to all the wonderful people that have ever come to contact during the campaign, It taught me how much the promotion of not only pleasing people, speaking to them, but also the people that work with you.

Blessings to all those who have served their time, would love to be mentioned. Well, here is my story, please take the time to read it. If you have any doubts, enough for a short electron. Tony thanks is to see how I'm doing and getting on in life, how that is.
