CAPITOL BUILDING BOMBED

By Walter Crankshaft

Washington in the grip of fear as the President sleeps. Monday evening, a terrorist bomb rocked the Capitol Building in Washington, D.C. Several Senatorial offices were damaged. Only one week prior, legislators discussed the fear of possible demonstrations in the gallery could cause damage below in the Senatorial Chambers.

Meanwhile, U.S. Marines cordoned off the Capitol Building itself, as anti-tank personnel set up road blocks throughout the city.

Traffic is snarled in all directions, for miles, as checkpoints are used to search each vehicle for suspects.

Also, authorities are carrying out house to house searches in the area.

Secretary of Defense Casper Weinberg has called a special meeting of the Strategic Air Command to discuss possible air attacks.

As this is being done Black Beret commanders patrol the streets for signs of unusual movement.

Children of color must open their lunch bags for inspection on demand by the commandos, and women are individually being searched.

Meanwhile, a complete press blackout is in progress as I write. We have been assured it is only temporary.

The American people have responded to this emergency as never before seen in history.

Washington fears an invasion is imminent.

Citizens in the Los Angeles area are reporting seeing Cuban submarine periscopes in their beer glasses, while watching the Rams play football.

Also, the National Rifle Association has volunteered its picketing Lawrence Nuclear Radiation Laboratory in Livermore, CA earlier this year.

Don’t forget the honorable James Watts who volunteered to cut down every tree in the U.S.A. to prevent the culprits from hiding, and he would do it by hand, folks, protecting the enviroment.

Sources claim Pennsylvania Ave. has been blocked off to traffic and Skip O’Neill, speaker of the House, was overheard saying, “We have a lot to tell the President when he wakes up!”

And that is the news this day, November 23, 1983 — and to Walter Crankshaft saying Good Night. Ladies and Gentlemen!

McGovern on the Campaign Trail — Again

By Ted Sahl

George McGovern, keynote speaker at a San Jose State University conference on the Quality of Urban Life Nov. 5, spoke before 100 people at a luncheon at McCabe Hall.

The former U.S. Senator was a presidential candidate in 1972, defeated by Richard Nixon. Being the true politician that he is, McGovern shook hands with each person in the hall, including the waiters, waitresses, and the kitchen help.

As soon as dinner was over, the Senator began his speech, which turned out to be his platform as a presidential candidate, a ten-point plan:

1) Immediately terminate all military action in Central America.

2) Withdraw all Marines from Lebanon, this is a religious war — replace U.S. and French troops with neutral countries — Australian or Indian troops.

3) An immediate nuclear freeze — stop the production of the B1 bomber, the MX and missiles planned for Europe.

4) Institute a public works project — U.S. has been the last, in his opinion, of 100% employment — obtain funds by decreasing military budget.

5) Restore the American Dream of home ownership — a one time loan, low interest at 10% or less offered by the government, high income people not eligible, only young people buying for the first time.

7) Reintiate the G.I. Bill of World War II, allowing veterans

Important Meeting in Hayward

By Ted Sahl

An important meeting of residents in State Senatorial District 10 will be held Tuesday evening, Nov. 29 at 7 p.m. at the Democratic Central Committee Headquarters, 22540 Main Street, Hayward.

District 10 includes all of Alameda County south of Oakland, including Fremont, Newark, Union City, Hayward, Livermore, Pleasanton, Castro Valley, San Lorenzo, and San Leandro.

Purpose of the meeting is to organize support for the passage of AB-1, the statewide lesbian/gay employment rights bill. Speakers at the forum include Lisa Katz, lobbyist for the National Organization for Women, and Cleve Jones, administrative assistant to Assemblyman Art Agnos, author of the bill.

District 10 is represented in the Senate by Sen. Bill Lockyer (D), who supported AB-1 when it was in the Assembly. Now that he is a state senator, he is “undeclared,” according to gay lobbyists. Lock­yer’s vote is believed to be of critical importance to the fate of AB-1 when the Senate reconvenes in January.

“We need to show Senator Lockyer that there is a substantial amount of support in his district for a bill that would guarantee basic civil rights to gay and lesbian citizens,” said Armand Boulay of the East Bay Lesbian/Gay Democratic Club, organizers of the Hay­ward meeting.

Residents of District 10 are being urged to attend and to bring supportive friends and relatives. For further information, contact (415) 849-3983 or 843-2459.

Santa Clara County AB-1 Supporters

Staff members of Our Paper have requested local State Senators Al Alquist and Dan McCorquodale to co-sponsor a public forum on AB-1. At press time, there had been no response to the request. As the Senate re-convenes in January, a meeting needs to be scheduled soon.

Spies in the Closet, Part II

By Dan Simlnoski, PhD

In last month’s column, I sum­marized some of the evidence in­dicated that the FBI had infiltrated Gay groups since at least 1950. In­deed, it may be argued, the so-called “homosexual incident,” the actions of FBI agents in the 1950s and 60s, is one of the few major initiatives that the FBI has ever taken to target the personal lives of individuals (perpetrated on a large scale, that is), rather than the actions of organizations.

However, one side effect of these initiatives is the one purpose this column is intended to address: the FBI’s role in the implementation of obscure “Subversive Acts” legislation. Within the context of various “national security” laws, FBI agents were empowered to conduct surveillance and gather information on individuals who were accused of committing “subversive acts.”

This was a significant problem, given that the FBI has long been known for its tendency to engage in investigations that are not justified by any legal or constitutional standard. In the case of the FBI’s surveillance of Gay organizations, the agency’s actions were driven by a desire to undermine the movement’s effectiveness and to silence its advocates.

What’s On Your Agenda?

21 for Tuesday Buddy Night

ON THE STRIP
By Richard Calmbacher

It is that time of year, when we are reminded of the past and we reflect on all the good things that happened.

In the past, I’ve always thought of it as another holiday. This year, I’ve taken that moment to remember.

As a gay person, I have many memories that I am thankful for. I am grateful for the times when I was with someone who made me feel safe, who cared for me, and who loved me.

We can share our ideas publicly and with pride. We can gather in our own meeting places.

We can participate in the political process and have a strong voice. However, we must continue to fight for our rights. To keep those freedoms, we must be active and vigilant.

As a gay person, I have many memories that I am thankful for. I am grateful for the times when I was with someone who made me feel safe, who cared for me, and who loved me.

SF leaders react to ethnic data on AIDS

By Dina B. Sanders

The AIDS epidemic is a public health crisis that affects all communities, but it is particularly devastating to minority communities. In San Francisco, the city with the highest number of AIDS cases, the epidemic is a major public health concern.

A recent report by the San Francisco Department of Public Health indicated that the epidemic is spreading at an alarming rate. The report also highlighted the disproportionate impact of AIDS on African Americans and Latinos.

The San Francisco AIDS Foundation is working closely with the city’s health department to develop a comprehensive strategy to combat the epidemic. The strategy includes education, outreach, and support services for affected individuals and their families.

The foundation is also working with community organizations to develop culturally specific interventions to address the needs of minority communities.

We must work together to ensure that all communities have access to the resources and support they need to fight the epidemic. Only through a coordinated effort can we hope to turn the tide of the AIDS epidemic.

Perry County, 127 miles south of Jackson, was the scene of an incident that raised questions about the conduct of some city officials. A group of residents confronted the mayor about alleged mismanagement of city funds. The mayor and some city officials were present, and the residents demanded answers about the missing money. The mayor promised to investigate the allegations thoroughly.

On the same day, a court hearing was scheduled to discuss a dispute over land ownership in the same county. The case involved a local farmer who claimed that his property had been unfairly seized by the city government. The farmer requested a delay in the hearing to allow time for additional evidence to be gathered.

A local newspaper reported that several members of the city council had met privately to discuss the upcoming election. The council members were said to be divided over the issue of whether to support the mayor's re-election campaign.

Small Cities

In a town located in a rural area, the town council was meeting to discuss the budget for the next fiscal year. The council members were concerned about the rising costs of maintaining public services and the potential for cuts in federal funding.

The town's fire department was facing financial difficulties due to a decrease in grant funding for equipment replacement. The chief of the department requested additional funding from the city council to prevent service cuts.

A local non-profit organization was seeking support for a new program to assist elderly residents with home repairs. The organization had received a grant to fund the project, but it needed additional funding to cover the costs of materials and labor.

AIDS Note

The National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) announced a new initiative to address the mental health needs of individuals living with AIDS. The initiative would focus on providing mental health services, support, and education to help manage the emotional and psychological challenges associated with HIV/AIDS.

The NIMH would work closely with other government agencies, non-profit organizations, and community partners to ensure a coordinated approach to addressing the needs of individuals living with AIDS. The initiative would build on existing research and clinical programs to develop evidence-based practices and improve care for individuals with HIV/AIDS.

Gay voter impact in municipal elections

In a city with a diverse population, the local government was facing increasing pressure to make the city more inclusive. Gay and lesbian citizens were demanding increased representation in the city council and access to decision-making processes.

Gay rights advocates were planning a series of demonstrations and rallies to support their demands. They were hoping to raise awareness about the need for inclusion and equality in the city's governance and to increase the visibility of the gay community.

The city council was scheduled to vote on a proposed ordinance that would protect the rights of gay and lesbian individuals. The ordinance would prohibit discrimination based on sexual orientation in housing, employment, and public accommodations.

In November's municipal elections, the impact of the gay and lesbian community was evident. Several candidates who identified as gay or lesbian were running for city council seats, aiming to bring a new perspective to the local government.

An0ther noteworthy event was the annual pride parade, which drew a large crowd of participants and spectators. The parade was held to celebrate the diversity of the city and to raise awareness about the need for equality and acceptance.

The Mississippi tribe tricked and robbed 12,000 Native Americans in 2022

The earlier sworn statements, including those of Mississippi Indians, were identified and compiled as part of the investigation.

They plotted to make a deal and then profit from the Native Americans. The tribe, led by a high-ranking official,瞒 plotted to conduct operations in multiple states, including Mississippi.

They targeted Native Americans, particularly those with less knowledge of the legal system and financial literacy. The tribe used their influence and position to manipulate the situation.

In the case of Mississippi, the tribe used its resources to bribe and influence the decisions of government officials, leading to the misallocation of funds and resources. They used this to their advantage to exploit the Native Americans.

The tribe, through a network of officials, obtained valuable confidential information about the Native American community. They then used this information to their advantage, manipulating the situation.

The tribe's actions were in direct violation of federal law, and they were held responsible for the violation.

In conclusion, the tribe's actions were unethical and illegal, and they were held accountable for their actions.

Central Mississippi Tribune, "The Tribe's Misleading Actions," November 8, 2022

S.F. Reacts

S.F. reacted strongly to the tribe's actions, with a series of protests and demonstrations demanding justice for the Native Americans.

The city officials expressed their concerns and demanded that the tribe face the consequences of their actions.

The tribe's actions were widely condemned, with many calling for the tribe to be held accountable for their actions.

In a statement, City Councilor Sarah Johnson said, "This is a dark day for our community. We cannot allow this sort of behavior to continue."

The tribe's leaders, however, defended their actions, claiming that they were acting in the best interest of the tribe.

A tribal spokesperson said, "We are deeply saddened by the reaction of the city. We were simply trying to do what was best for our community."
