The Mayor has indicated that he intends to pay for the ballpark with Hotel Tax revenues. The Hotel Tax Fund, however, appropriates monies for specific expenditures and a ballpark is not one of them. Funds not allocated as stipulated revert to the City's General Fund where they may be used for general government operations which include provision of public services.

Last year the City cut $70 million in direct Public Service to the neighborhoods. These services have not been restored. If additional monies are available why wouldn't you like the City to spend them?

Boycott Domino Pizza

I would like to share something with other pizza lovers who may be reading this column. In 1990, I first discovered Domino Pizza. I was in love with the New York style pizza. Now, after living for almost 10 years in San Francisco, I have decided to boycott this chain.

According to The Wall Street Journal, Domino's Pizza, America's largest chain of pizza restaurants, is facing a boycott by gay and lesbian groups. Rumors have been circulating that they are refusing to serve gay couples. Domino's辩知, was one of the largest pizzerias in San Francisco.

I have not been able to find any way to verify these reports. I have tried calling the company's headquarters, but no one would return my calls. I have also tried contacting San Francisco city officials, but no one has been able to confirm the reports.

I believe that it is important to support companies that are supportive of gay rights. I have been a customer of Domino's Pizza for many years, but I will no longer be a customer of this chain. I encourage others to join me in this boycott.

East Coast Controversy Over “Q” Trial Results; San Francisco Releases Protocol Data

Finally, Some Good News

Composted Q is not a drug to be toyed with, and the side effects one can endure, even the initial data that has been released within the AIDS community is not reassuring. Dr. John H. Schlenke, who heads the Project Inform treatment protocol, stressed that having an IRB does not remove the necessity for critical review of the protocol or standard-of-care violations. Delaney contends that if Sheaffer’s death was the result of any problem not directly related to trichosanthin, having an IRB would have made no difference. He says that trichosanthin is a safer and less toxic drug than most of the other chemotherapy drugs. The dispute has reached New York, where Delaney and Dr. Waites both stated his opposition in the New York Times article, "Dr. Starrette is ‘scared to death’ by the mistakes that routinely occur in the clinic, whether or not an IRB is in place. Delaney says that an IRB has been an essential part of the protocol and that an IRB is necessary every time an unapproved drug is used. That, he says, would be true even if the drug is being used in the clinic, not in the hospital.”

Dr. Prince, also a consultant at the San Francisco site, has stated his opposition in the San Francisco Times. As for the lack of an IRB, Delaney contends that if Sheaffer’s death was the result of any problem not directly related to trichosanthin, having an IRB would have made no difference. Delaney says that trichosanthin is a safer and less toxic drug than most of the other chemotherapy drugs. Delaney says that an IRB has been an essential part of the protocol and that an IRB is necessary every time an unapproved drug is used. Delaney denies that AmFAR was ever acting in its capacity as a patient advocate from the very beginning. California Bar Endorses Gay Marriage Resolution

BY STEF MCDONALD

In a little-noted moment, the California Bar Association passed a resolution supporting gay marriage at the annual Conference of Delegates held in San Diego. The resolution received much attention when the San Francisco Bar first introduced it in the spring, but the statewide action generated little debate or press coverage.

The resolution passed at the Conference of Delegates held September 15-18 in San Francisco passed without debate. Several official delegations, including the Orange County, Fresno, Sacramento, and San Fernando Valley delegations issued a call-up, the resolution passed without debate.

Delegations which oppose a resolution may or may not choose to "call it up." If any official delegation requests a call up, the resolution passes. Several people stood up and said they were changing their previous vote (and floor debate).

As the Bay Area lawyers for Individual Freedom (BALIF) vote on whether they approved the resolution. Several people stood up and said they were changing their previous vote (and floor debate) in favor of the resolution.

"We presented it as a civil rights issue," says Theresa Stewart, the other BALIF delegate in San Francisco. "People who get married have a right to say who should love them. I don't know what the next step is—it might be introducing resolutions in each of the counties."

Ironically, the lack of opposition and public focus on the resolution "means two things to me. After five years of fighting, it's a step in a long battle."

Stewart says, "Some who voted against the resolution will argue it's one way to bring more attention to issues of homophobia. The people who were left out in many areas."

The resolution would not change the laws to expand them. We should con­ front those exclusions in each of the areas. The resolution "means two things to me. After five years of fighting, it's a step in a long battle."

March organizer Jessica Braverman of San Francisco NOW stresses, "We have laws in California that are pro-choice but they're not beyond defeat, so we have to keep vigilant." "I see it as a very important issue in the next several years."

The Religious Right has launched a well-funded campaign to defeat Proposition S. They know that if they can defeat us here — they can defeat us anywhere. Polls show that if the election was held tomorrow, we would lose.

The council's two-known opponents, Lloyd Massey, is also a candidate for city council, and is known to be a supporter of gay rights legislation. (See story on page 4 for details.)

On July 11, under heavy pressure from both sides, the Contra Costa County Board of Supervisors voted 3-2 to repeal the Contra Costa County Anti-Discrimination Ordinance. The vote came after several months of public debate on the ordinance, which had been introduced in response to a string of hate crimes against gay and lesbian citizens.

The ordinance would have prohibited discrimination in housing, employment, and public accommodations based on sexual orientation or gender identity. It was the result of a long and contentious process that involved a广泛 of community groups and individuals.

The repeal vote was seen as a major victory for the local conservative and gay rights movements. It also signaled a shift in the political climate in the area, where some had previously been skeptical of gay rights efforts.

In the wake of the vote, there was a mix of relief and disappointment. Some celebrated the end of a long battle, while others expressed concern about what the future might hold.

SOME HISTORY

The Contra Costa County Anti-Discrimination Ordinance was first introduced in 1988, after a series of hate crimes against gay and lesbian citizens. The ordinance was the result of a grassroots effort to address the problem.

The ordinance was passed unanimously by the board, but faced strong opposition from some members of the public, particularly those who opposed gay rights. The ordinance was challenged in court, but upheld in a decision that set a precedent for similar efforts.

In the years since, the ordinance has been a flashpoint in the area, with regular debates and protests.

TACTIC CHANGE

The vote to repeal the ordinance was seen as a significant change in the political climate. The council had previously voted to maintain the ordinance, but after months of public debate, it was decided to repeal it.

The council's decision was seen as a response to the increasing pressure from the conservative movement in the area.

FOR THE ORDINANCE

Proponents of the ordinance argued that it was necessary to protect the rights of all citizens, regardless of their sexual orientation. They pointed to the increasing number of hate crimes against gay and lesbian citizens as evidence of the need for such protections.

However, opponents of the ordinance argued that it was unnecessary and that it would lead to discrimination.

The council voted to repeal the ordinance after hearing from both sides and considering the various arguments.

Successful Legal Challenge to Contra Costa County Anti-Discrimination Ordinance Could Limit Civil Rights Appeals Statewide

While Contra Costa County's Anti-Discrimination Ordinance, the first of its kind in California, was widely seen as a victory for gay rights, a recent legal challenge could have serious implications for civil rights appeals state-wide.

The ordinance, which was passed in 1988, was challenged in court by a group of religious leaders who argued that it violated their First Amendment rights. The court agreed, and ruled that the ordinance was unconstitutional.

This ruling could have serious implications for other civil rights appeals, as it sets a precedent for similar challenges.

The overturning of the Contra Costa County Ordinance could have far-reaching implications for civil rights protections in California. It could lead to similar challenges to other civil rights ordinances in the state, and could potentially lead to a rollback of civil rights protections.

On the other hand, the decision could also be seen as a victory for the religious community, who were able to challenge the ordinance and have it overturned.

In the end, the decision will likely have a significant impact on civil rights protections in California, and could have far-reaching implications for other civil rights efforts.

BEHIND THE HEADLINES

Recognizing the complex nature of the Contra Costa County Ordinance, this column will examine some of the key issues behind the headlines.

First, it is important to note that the ordinance was not just about protecting gay rights. It was also about protecting the rights of all citizens, regardless of their sexual orientation or gender identity.

Second, it is important to recognize the role of the local community in shaping the ordinance. The ordinance was the result of a long and contentious process that involved a广泛 of community groups and individuals.

Finally, it is important to recognize the role of the courts in shaping civil rights protections. The courts have an important role to play in ensuring that civil rights protections are upheld, and in protecting the rights of all citizens.

In the end, the decision to overturn the Contra Costa County Ordinance is likely to have far-reaching implications for civil rights protections in California. It is a reminder of the complex nature of civil rights issues, and the importance of community involvement in shaping civil rights protections.

In Israel, the rabbinical establishment controls all your personal life—birth, marriage, divorce, and death. There is no civil marriage, just religious marriage. There is a religious oppression generally on lesbians and gay men. There is just one organization, the SPPR. There was a law against homosexual relations—but they have never been in force. In 1974, there were just seven women who were ill. At the time of our interview, there were 200 who were HIV positive. But a lot of people don't know that. They expect to come away with a solid base dialogue from which to build.

Some people have never heard of the SPPR. We have one organization, the AIDS Task Force, but it's not powerful enough to do much. There are a few groups that are powerful, but they have never been in force. In 1974, there were just seven women who were ill. At the time of our interview, there were 200 who were HIV positive. But a lot of people don't know that. They expect to come away with a solid base dialogue from which to build.

I'm Supporting Proposition P for a New Ballpark.

"San Francisco voters have a choice in this November's ballot for a new China Basin Ballpark. I'm supporting Proposition P for a new ballpark, and I'd like to tell you why I'm making this decision for us.

Like many of you there are other issues that are a higher priority for me than a new ballpark. However, I believe that as a Mayor, I do have a role to play in improving our city. A new stadium could provide better facilities for our professional baseball teams. I also believe that our new stadium should provide opportunities for economic development and growth.

I've been working with the San Francisco Giants and the San Francisco Municipal Railway to develop a plan that will provide for a modern, high-quality stadium while preserving the integrity of Mission Bay and the surrounding neighborhoods. The proposed stadium is designed to minimize its impact on the environment and to provide a variety of community benefits.

I'm convinced that the new stadium will be good for San Francisco. It will attract visitors from around the world, create jobs and boost the local economy. It will also provide a place for the city to celebrate its cultural and sporting traditions.

Please vote yes on Proposition P. Thank you."

National Cancer Institute Reports
Antiviral Found in Blue-Green Algae

Scientists at the U.S. National Cancer Institute and the University of Hawaii have discovered an antiviral compound in blue-green algae that apparently offers new possibilities in the treatment of AIDS and possibly other viral infections.

The algae, called "stigmatellin," was found in the laboratory of Dr. Gregory Patterson at the University of Hawaii. Dr. Patterson and his colleagues have been investigating the potential of blue-green algae to produce drugs that might be used to treat viral infections such as AIDS.

The algae were collected off the coast of Hawaii and sent to Dr. Patterson for analysis. The scientists used a technique called "fractionation" to separate the algae into different components. They found that one of the components contained the antiviral compound.

The compound, which has been given the name "stigmatellin," is a small molecule that inhibits the replication of the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV). The scientists are now working on ways to develop the compound into a drug that could be used to treat AIDS patients.

"We think this is a very promising lead," said Dr. Patterson. "It's the first time we've found an antiviral compound in a blue-green algae that has activity against HIV."

for a study of an immune-modulating drug being developed by Dr. Marcus Conant of UCSF. Subjects may not be on other immune enhancing drugs nor AZT. For information call: 661-1021

Combination of AZT and other drugs may be described by some as "chemo-therapy" for the immune system. The recent interest in combination treatment suggests that, by interfering with different stages of the virus life cycle, earlier treatment might result in a stronger immune response and a longer life span for HIV patients.

The bottom line is that if you are at risk of getting the disease, you should seek testing. But if you do test positive, there are now options for you and your care provider to consider. The most important of these are AZT and DDI, which are nucleoside analogs, and alpha interferon, DDC, interleukin II, factor (GM-CSF), and other drugs. NIAID is also sponsoring trials to determine if AZT transmission to their infants.

WILL I, have been reading all the books.
Getting perspective: Learning the "rules of the game." Winning and losing,
within, in the world, and in love.
Right now I have a great job, a great husband, a great career, a great home. But, I still have doubts. And I don't have any great friends. Isn't that sad?

Some may think so, but I have come to understand that the key to personal success is to have a good personal image. And the key to that is to be a success at work. To do this, you must make sure that you look good at work.

One of the best ways to do this is to make sure that you never get caught with your pants down. And having a great image is just as important as dressing well. If you are dressed well, then people will think that you are a success. And if you are a success, then people will be more likely to listen to you. And if people listen to you, then they will be more likely to do what you say. And if they do what you say, then you will be a successful person.

The secret to being a successful

Notes From an Opera Queen

The San Francisco Opera does have a tradition of programming operas from almost any era and first and do we think those in SANE just to won’t see. A lot of people from for such as one-slot workshops is second, well-organized, and well beloved.

You'll probably have seen it before. Not surprisingly, it’s a lot of work, but it is a lot of work. The company is looking forward to doing it again, and perhaps an even better production. It was a very good show, and the company is looking forward to doing it again.

Gentlemen's Motorcyde Tombstone Tattoo Party Show. PWEI went on to create a fun, fast-paced, & exciting, with three bars, lots of pool tables and pinball machines, a large dance floor with very elaborate lighting and a stage. Certain areas were enclosed off by these transparent curtains, but you could still hear the blaring of music from the main street entrance at the bar to keep the crowd.

Thus being the ability, and walking through their feet being lit up through the roof. The club was very popular with the kids, and we always ended up with a box or young and old, boys or in mens' tees, though the bar was sectioned off by those transparent curtains, but you could still hear the blaring of music from the main street entrance at the bar to keep the crowd.

Friedrich

It is the second mission to prevent the loss of any genre. Théâtre Elysée has suffered a great cropper in its present production, Friedrich, by the New York-based director, Patrice Tappin. It is concerned to the story of Friedrich, a man who, for a sonnet of humor, this silly little hurly-burly adventure to tell the tale of Friedrich von Schadow, a Franconian poet and radical who visited Friedrich the Great, who was banished from Berlin and exiled to Austria.

"Friedrich," in the first dress of comedy, Visa New York to the security of his parents' house in the suburbs.

A work which reveals the suffering of Friedrich the Great's lineage, the (other words). The director is a period and classical play.Washington's ragtag soldiers into a respectable Fighting force at Valley Forge.

rather see a real play with gay actors, if such rather outline for a drama—that a college a fictional life, offers some real possibilities.

Catherine Jones (Claudine) is a young, beautiful, and sexually experienced woman. Catherine is a new student at Northwestern University and is staying with her parents' home in Colorado. She has dreams of becoming a suburban housewife and mother.

The play's the author's want to be made by us. And I confess 1 was rather charmed by Herbert B. Hadl, full voice was a dimunition to tone, especially in the "Carnival" at the ball, though the theatre was hushed and the evening went well with unobtrusive Realism.

The play is surrealistic, non-linear, poetic, and Lennon. The stage settings and costumes are reflective of a moment of sexual passion she used to be. The scene shifts to a ring, a circus metaphor worked well for displaying the colors of each other's presence. The third Figure has her veils pulled away from her face.

Pancho Villa

411 7th Street, San Francisco
Open 11 a.m.-12 p.m., Tuesday
For barhoppers who successfully go from one restaurant to another, Pancho Villa is a good choice. The tacos and your meals are assisted by some of the best bar staff and a place that serves wine on the house.

The Jesters sang "Creole Love Song" while Barry Groves, the hotel's operator, sang the same ballad. The band members were happy to do this for the occasion, but they did not have the luxury of being able to sing this tune on their own.

Since my arrival September 1, I've tried many Mexican restaurants, but the one that stands out in my mind is El Taco Loco. I went there on my first day in town and was so impressed I came back again on my last day. The food is excellent, and the service is top-notch. The prices are reasonable, and the atmosphere is friendly. I highly recommend El Taco Loco to anyone looking for a great Mexican meal.

The chef of El Taco Loco is a native of Mexico, and he takes great pride in preparing authentic Mexican dishes. He uses fresh ingredients and a variety of spices to create dishes that are both flavorful and satisfying. The tacos are made with soft, fresh tortillas and filled with a variety of meats, such as pork, beef, and chicken. The salsa is made from scratch and is fresh and flavorful.

The menu features a wide variety of dishes, including enchiladas, fajitas, and mole. The drinks menu is extensive, with a selection of tequilas, mezcal, and other Mexican cocktails. The restaurant is open daily from 10:30 a.m. to 10 p.m.

El Taco Loco ★
374 Mission Street, San Francisco
3.5 out of 5 stars, every day

In contrast to the frenetic atmosphere at other restaurants in the city, and I know that each one has its dedicated customers. They are extremely generous with their portions, and the food is prepared with care. The service is friendly and attentive, and the atmosphere is comfortable. I highly recommend El Taco Loco to anyone looking for a great meal in San Francisco.

It is clear that economics must read more than just market forces and that we do in recent years. In particular, Gary Becker, a prominent Nobel Prize winner, has done much work on economic theory. He argues that economics is a tool for understanding social phenomena, even in cases where there are no markets or market-like institutions.

B.McD: Still, it's not true that economics is simply about markets.

B.McD: Yes, it's a valid point. But he's very much within the tradition that way that someone from the University of Chicago, which Becker originated, now economists haven't looked at before. The theory is highly relevant, with a conviction that the more human needs are recognized, the less the focus on non-markets activities. The problem is, however, that many economic arguments in economics are not valued or are under-valued, since they do not enter into market processes. Since most work traditionally done by women is not counted in the markets. Activities are productive and have value only if they are assigned a price in the market. If someone is counted, it's because market transactions are valued, not because they are productive. The problem is that we have to assign a market price to everything.
