Offensive Adjectives

I am enclosing a section of the letters page from a recent edition of your paper, which I feel is outrageous. If it were to be printed in any way, I believe it would seriously undermine the professional reputation of any newspaper that would print such an article.

The writer in this instance is having no trouble in using language that would be considered inappropriate in polite society; the letter is one of the most offensive that I have ever read, and I sincerely hope that you will not publish it.

I would appreciate any reassurance that you will not print this letter.

Sincerely,

P.S. I am enclosing a copy of the letter in question.

Your reporting on the San Francisco Gay Pride Parade (Aug. 8, p. 2) overlooked the presence of the Women's Marching and Dancing contingent. This group was clearly visible in front of the Trans and Lez contingents, both of which had signs that read, "Trans and Lesbians March Together." We were able to add a very diverse group of women to the parade.

Invisible Among the Visible

I am not just angry. I was emotionally repainful and on the opposite end of humanity, the specter of violence and death. I was overcome with such feelings of disbelief, such a lack of awareness, such a lack of understanding. I was overwhelmed by the pain and the sorrow of my lost friends. I was overwhelmed with the knowledge that this was happening to me. I was overwhelmed with the knowledge that I was not alone.

But then, as the days went by, I began to realize that there was something else. There was a feeling of isolation. I was feeling isolated. I was feeling alone. I was feeling like I was the only one who felt this way. I was feeling like I was the only one who understood. I was feeling like I was the only one who could do something about it.

And so I began to write. I began to express my feelings in words. I began to share my experiences. I began to tell my story. I began to speak out. I began to write about my pain and my sorrow. I began to write about my anger and my frustration. I began to write about my hope and my faith. I began to write about my love and my compassion.

And so I began to understand. I began to understand that I was not alone. I began to understand that there were others like me. I began to understand that our pain and our sorrow and our anger and our frustration were not unique to us. I began to understand that there were others who felt the same way. I began to understand that we were not the only ones who could do something about it.

And so I began to write. I began to express my feelings in words. I began to share my experiences. I began to tell my story. I began to speak out. I began to write about my pain and my sorrow. The Tikkon Conference of Liberal & Progressive Jewish Intellectuals

By Erica Mandel

With everyone I know being around at the same time, the Tikkon Conference on the weekend of November 10, was an opportunity for the community of Liberal and Progressive Jewish Intellectuals. The conference was held at San Francisco State University, and was open to all Jews of any age or background.

The Tikkon Conference was an effort to create a space for Jewish intellectuals to come together and share their ideas and perspectives. The conference was designed to be a place for Jews who don’t have a deity.

The conference was divided into two main parts: the first part was dedicated to the theme of “Tikkun: The healing, transforming, and transformational work.” The second part was dedicated to the theme of “Identity in the Context of Any Organized Jewish Group.”

The conference began with a keynote address by Rabbi Yoel Kahn from Sha’ar Zahav and Debby Wasserman-Shrauger, who spoke about the importance of Tikkun and the healing power of forgiveness. They discussed the idea that forgiveness is necessary for personal growth and healing.

The conference then moved on to discussions about the role of women in Judaism and the importance of gender equality. The conference featured a panel discussion on women’s roles in the Jewish community, with a focus on the challenges that women face in the modern world.

The conference also included panel discussions on the role of religion in society, the impact of the internet on Jewish identity, and the role of religion in addressing social justice issues. The conference concluded with a keynote address by Rabbi Yoel Kahn from Sha’ar Zahav and Debby Wasserman-Shrauger, who spoke about the importance of Tikkun and the healing power of forgiveness. They discussed the idea that forgiveness is necessary for personal growth and healing.

The conference was a valuable opportunity for Jewish intellectuals to come together and share their ideas and perspectives. It was a space for people of different backgrounds and beliefs to come together and learn from each other.

Benefits Reported
The following table shows the benefits that people believed they have had from hypericin. The survey was done by telephone, in late 1988, of 119 people who used the whole-plant extract of St. John's wort (Hypericum perforatum) as a dietary supplement. The survey could not possibly cover all of the information that the respondents had available, but their limitations must be considered.

BABN is an umbrella organization for the bisexual community. Babn sponsors several organizations and events and encourages the creation of new ones. Babn's goals include:

1) To challenge the stereotype of a bisexual as a sexual deviant or a threat to the mono-sexual community.
2) To provide a forum for the exchange of ideas and experiences among bisexuals.
3) To increase public awareness of bisexuals' existence and concerns. Babn also addresses the needs of the bisexual community through:

a) Organizing conferences, workshops, and seminars on the issues facing bisexuals

b) Providing a newsletter, which is free to those who join Babn

Support the Resistance

The resistance to the war in Vietnam shaped the political consciousness of a generation of Americans and was a catalyst for the civil rights movement. The movement against the war was a significant factor in the victory of George McGovern over Richard Nixon in the 1972 presidential election. The war in Vietnam was characterized by massive U.S. military involvement, with over 500,000 American troops stationed in the country at its peak. The war was also marked by widespread anti-war protests both in the United States and around the world.

The war in Vietnam was a complex and controversial conflict that involved a range of actors and interests. The war was fought between the Viet Cong, a communist guerrilla group, and the forces of the Republic of Vietnam, which was supported by the United States. The war was also a global conflict, with involvement from other countries, including China and the Soviet Union. The war in Vietnam was a significant event in the history of the United States and had a profound impact on the country and its people.

An important part of connecting with the women who will make the '90s gay is understanding why I spent a lot of time just sitting about my own disability. AIDS has reinforced my experiences, impressions and points of view. But I was not alone. I knew I wasn't the only person with AIDS. Many times my non-disabled lover didn't understand what I spent a lot of time just sitting about my own disability. I was, simply, exhausted. Getting a glimmer of the kind of attention and support I might have been able to give to you for "I'm a little bit O.K." is still very difficult. As I have matured, I have found it easier to understand why I spent a lot of time just sitting about my own disability. AIDS has reinforced my experiences, impressions and points of view. ROCKING ON THE BIG ONE

Taurus: This is sort of a great time to get away. There's a retrograde coming up so take advantage of the opportunity to enjoy. It could be a lot better, but no guarantees here in San Francisco. In 1990 the dates to look for are January 1st and 2nd. It could as well be in Algeria or Melanesia as here in the US.

Leo: Work can be lots of fun right now, but there can be a source of absolute madness. Your papier-mâché tree ornaments or your em- ployment situation may be a source of confusion and changes are soon inevitable.

The Ambience department is not all that broad, but the great bar is - and is, in fact, one of the best in the city. It's an intimate setting, efficiently paced at the Plateau on Mission and 19th Street, and the Whiskey Room on Mission and 18th Street. The emphasis is on good food and wine, and the wine list is particularly well-chosen. The menu offers a variety of small plates, including a selection of cheese and charcuterie. The atmosphere is relaxed and welcoming, with comfortable seating and a warm ambiance. It's a great spot for a date or a reunion with friends.

党ing with George Clinton

Do you wanna dance? It was a simple question - sort of, depending on who you were with. But with four of my first few Jazz High School dancers, the girls always seemed to answer with a resounding "yes!" and a great smile, right at the beginning, setting the stage for a night of footwork and hip-shaking that would make one want to dance, too. With a lot of big, blaring horn blasts, the girls lit up the stage, grabbing the attention of the audience.

Unpredictably by the lack of willing dance partners, 50 or so people gathered to dance and sing along with the music. It was a funk freedom fighters grand ball, and a rousing sort of "give peace a chance" attitude was the order of the day.

The show kicked off with 'Somebody's Watching Me,' from the early days of dance music. Then came a mix of songs that kept the audience moving. 'Kassem,' from the 1970s, was a highlight, as was the dance classic 'Papa Was A Rollin' Stone.'

The audience was divided in their opinions of some of the newer songs. 'It's A Beautiful Day' brought mixed reactions, with some feeling the music was too slow and others that it was just right. 'We Are The World' was a hit with the crowd, and 'Water Under The Bridge' brought down the house.

As the night went on, the energy increased. 'Flashlight' was a favorite, and the encore of 'Red Hot Chili Peppers' had the audience dancing in the aisles.

Overall, it was a night to remember, with George Clinton and his band delivering a show that was a perfect blend of old and new. The music was fresh and exciting, and the audience was left wanting more.

Lust and Pity

By Randy Turoff

From New York City, dyke drama has invaded San Francisco. Lust and Pity by table husband of our community, and by the way, has been so hilarious and entertaining. The Butthole Surfers have just released "The Unpredictable Sound of Bubbling Grungy Bong."

The most miserable and -most moving—

Theatre Review

Ever take your mother to see. Girls do it drama and keeps the rather dark aspects of lesbian passion—jealousy, betrayal, suicide and of campy comedy. When we see the philanderer realize you're having a period of bad judg-

The underpinning plot sustains the lingerie package of the play. There were an excessive scenes on stage, the soundtrack was mostly junk and street flotsam in the barricade scene under Paris to the spectacular street barricade of ourselves. I agree with her. -Pamela is appropriately dumb-cluckish as Artie's lover (who admits she's a lousy lay, but has confidence in her ability to bind a man through her presence alone). When Artie is looking left for Artie to do the strangest thing.

The play is really about much more than love, of course. I don't pretend to understand all of the coincidences involved, but it's obvious that the house of these links is made by a woman. She is catered to and is a four-character drama, and is at the Curran Theatre. March of 1987, has won eight Tonys, and been named best musical by the N.Y. Drama Critics. -THE GALLEON

Lodz Ghetto

REVIEWED BY: EUGENIA MARKUS

I have a distinct memory from my childhood of climbing on a fence during a family picnic. The adults were busy talking, walking, and drinking while I was trying to figure out how to climb off the fence to get to the field. My brothers and I crawled around the fence, and I thought we were the "rebels" of our neighborhood. My uncle called out, "Listen, if you have to play through the fence, don't pull off the boards, the Gentiles." His daughter Johanna emerged from the background with tears on her face and scolded us. "The game's over," she said, "and you've ruined it for everyone." My uncle calmed me and restored the fence, but I remained intrigued by the idea of rebellion.

I was one of the few kids who knew about the Holocaust. Like my friends, I often listened to the stories of the adults about the events that occurred during World War II. We would discuss the consequences of these events and how they affected our lives. It was a topic that was often mentioned in our daily conversations.

Four years after the war, the Lodz Ghetto was recreated in a film. The film was based on the real-life events that occurred in the Lodz Ghetto and how it affected the people who lived there. The film was a powerful reminder of the atrocities committed during World War II and how they continue to impact us today.

At first, my parents were hesitant to watch the film, but they eventually decided to watch it with me. I remember sitting in the theater, watching the events unfold on the screen, and feeling a sense of duty to learn about the history of the Holocaust.

As I watched the film, I was struck by the courage of the people who lived in the Lodz Ghetto. They faced incredible obstacles, but they continued to fight for their lives and their families. I was moved by the resilience of the people who lived in the ghetto and how they managed to survive despite the hardship they faced.

One of the most poignant moments in the film was when a woman was taken away by the Nazis. I remember thinking, "Why did this happen? Why were these people treated like this?" It was a question that I couldn't answer, but I knew that I had to learn more about the events that occurred during World War II.

I remember leaving the theater after watching the film and feeling a sense of responsibility to learn more about the Holocaust. I resolved to do my part in remembering the events and honoring the memory of those who lost their lives during this time.

I am grateful for the film and how it motivated me to learn more about the history of the Holocaust. It is a reminder of the importance of remembering the past and honoring those who suffered.

Gay Matching
BY DEENA JONES

O n a personal note: Last month when I wrote about Dr. Ashly, I went on a rant about the need for better healthcare. However, in the end, I realized that the focus should be on prevention and education. It's time for us to come together and make a change. Let's start by supporting our local clinics and organizations. Together, we can make a difference.

For only 9¢ per minute, you can talk live with up to fourteen other Northern California gay and lesbian men who are looking for a safe and comfortable environment.
