Act to forbid discrimination in job basis of sexual orientation. Yet the California has been halted in the state's Fair Employment Practices Committee on a vote of 11 to 8 on Tuesday, January 14 after several hours of testimony about the applicability of the San Francisco's new law to homosexuals.

First Challenge For S.F. Gay Rights Bill

In the first major court case to deal specifically with gay rights in California, the San Francisco gay rights organization which proposes to challenge the state's traditional definition of sexual orientation, Keeler's law has filed suit against the state. The suit was filed by Charles Wallingford, the lawyer for the city of the First Presbyterian Church of San Francisco.

The court case could decide whether San Francisco's church has the right to refuse to rent to gay rights organizations.

In May of 1978, the city's first city council passed an ordinance that would make it illegal for any employer to discriminate against an employee on the basis of his or her sexual orientation.

The city council was asked to reconsider the ordinance in June of 1978, but it was not changed.

After four months of service, a gay activist was expelled from the United States by Immigration and Naturalization Service officials. The nine-block-long line of marchers converged on city hall. The marchers counted the speeches and politicians with the compromise, again attacked.

As the marchers approached the rally, a few hundred people gathered on the stairs of City Hall to protest the march. The crowd consisted of gay activists and civilian.
Gay Aid Sought In Registrar Ouster

The actual campaign was a mirror-reversal of the actual campaign to save the old building. The office of the registrar of voters, which occupies the building, was under threat, and the building was saved. The registrar is a state official who oversees elections, and his office was also under threat. The campaign to save the building was successful, and the registrar's office was saved.

The campaign to save the building was supported by a coalition of community groups, including the Women's Caucus and the Gay Task Force. The Women's Caucus was led by Dede Ranahan, president of Diablo-Alameda County Coalition of Women Business Owners, who is also a member of the Industrial Relations Committee and a member of the Women's Caucus, the educational for all parties involved.

The Gay Task Force was led by Michael Lobell, producer of the movie "You're a Whole New Generation of Gay People." The movie was released in 1980, and it was a hit. The Gay Task Force was also successful in its campaign, and it helped to bring attention to the issue of discrimination against gay people.

The campaign to save the building was also supported by Jo Daly, who was then the police commissioner. Jo Daly was a strong supporter of the campaign, and she helped to raise awareness of the issue. She was also a strong supporter of the Women's Caucus and the Gay Task Force.

The campaign to save the building was also supported by the Sutter Medical Group, which is headquartered in San Francisco. The Sutter Medical Group is a large healthcare provider, and it was a strong supporter of the campaign. The group was led by Sutter Medical Group President William L. Conn, who is also the director of the San Francisco Hospital.

The campaign to save the building was also supported by the Alameda County Coalition of Women Business Owners, which was led by Dede Ranahan. The coalition was also supported by the Women's Caucus, which was led by Dede Ranahan and Doreen Chinn. The coalition was also supported by the Gay Task Force, which was led by Michael Lobell.

Dancin' Til the Break of Day

MARATHON by Margaret Edson, directed by Hal Aronson. A review by Robert E. Prange. Through February 17.

A well-plotted yet simply constructed play, "Marathon" examines the life of the Greek sage and poet Homer, who spent seven years writing the Iliad and the Odyssey, which many regard as the first great works of Western drama. Edson's characters, which include a group of students and a group of modern-day Greek scholars, reflect the original play's themes of war and peace, heroism and suffering, and the quest for truth and beauty.

Que Sera Sara

A memory play about Charlie, his foster family, and his struggle with addiction by Sue Zemel. Through February 17.

The play is set in the 1940s and follows the life of Charlie, a young boy who is taken in by a foster family after the death of his parents. As he grows older, Charlie is forced to confront his own demons and the addictive behavior that plagues his family. The play explores the complexities of addiction and the impact it has on those around it.

Art on display represent a portion of the vast theatrical holdings in San Francisco, and were donated by the late Mrs. Adolf B. Spreckels and Mr. and Mrs. Nikita D. Lobonov. Preparations for the display had been underway for some time, and various important works with the other, she explained to theater historians have come to recognize the unprecedented nature of the exhibition, which features a handful of major United States depositories of twentieth-century theatrical holdings.

The designs of Mstislav Doboujinsky are characteristic of his work in St. Petersburg in the late nineteenth century, where he was centered in the world of avant-garde theater. Several of his set designs are brilliantly powerful, including his work on "Maschera," a production that inaugurated the New York, in 1940.

The contemporary nature photography of the contemporary nature photography of Burt Odaadro is described as though it were imbued with all of the power of Doboujinsky's sets, a testament to the seamless integration of visual and theatrical art in the hands of a master. Odaandro's work is a part of the collection of Helen drain, who was known as an "open" if not daring, trendsetter in her time. The contemporary nature photography of Odaandro is known for its vitality and wonderful clarity of vision, which although sometimes stylized, manages to capture the essence of the subject matter. The contemporary nature photography of Odaandro is characterized by a deft use of lighting, a masterful control of composition, and an ability to capture the moment in a way that is both immediate and timeless.

In particular, Odaandro's work is known for its ability to convey the mood and atmosphere of a moment in time. His work is characterized by a level of detail that is both impressive and compelling, with a focus on the small and intricate aspects of the subject matter. The contemporary nature photography of Odaandro is a testament to the power of visual art and its ability to convey a message and evoke an emotional response in the viewer.

Going Ape Over "B" Movies

By Steve Marcus

"A picture you can't wait to see is one you can't wait to tell people about," said one fan of the movie "Apes," which was released in 1974.

But for many years, the "B" movie was considered a low-budget, low-quality genre. However, in recent years, the "B" movie has become a respected and beloved part of the film industry.

The "B" movie is a type of film that is usually cheaper to produce than a "major" film. They are often made quickly and with limited resources, and are often aimed at a specific audience. The "B" movie is a genre that has been around for many years, and has produced some of the most iconic and memorable films of all time.

The "B" movie is a type of film that is often dismissed as being of lower quality than a "major" film. However, many "B" movies have gone on to become classics in their own right. Films such as "The Fly," "The Incredibles," and "The Bad Seed" are all examples of "B" movies that have become beloved by audiences around the world.

These films often have a unique and distinctive style, and are often known for their creative use of budgets, and their innovative use of special effects. They are often the first films to introduce new ideas and concepts, and are often the basis for larger and more expensive films.

"B" movies are often seen as a way for filmmakers to experiment with new ideas, and to push the boundaries of what is possible in filmmaking. They are often seen as a way for filmmakers to showcase their skills and creativity, and to create something that is truly unique.

Maligning Mahler and Other Matters: Three Symphony Reviews

by Don Botelho

PITTSBURGH: During the season's short run of Mahler's Fifth Symphony, Pittsburgh Symphony maestro Karl Böhm had a few things to say about the composer. The admiring audience probably noted that the Fifth was a monumental work of art, but it may have been interested to hear Mr. Böhm's more precise view of Mahler's character. "The Fifth was a tone poem," Mr. Böhm said. "It was a tone poem for the orchestra." And in that spirit, Mr. Böhm conducted the Fifth with the same emphasis on the orchestra's role in the work. The Fifth was a tone poem for the orchestra, and the orchestra had the last word. The conductor was not concerned with the soloists, but with the orchestra. The Fifth was a tone poem for the orchestra, and the orchestra had the last word.

Mr. Böhm's view of Mahler's character may have been surprising to some, but it was consistent with his view of Mahler as a composer. Mahler was a composer who cared about the orchestra, and who cared about the orchestra's role in the work. Mr. Böhm's view of Mahler as a composer may have been surprising to some, but it was consistent with his view of Mahler as a composer who cared about the orchestra, and who cared about the orchestra's role in the work.

Mayor Appoints Police Commission

Mayor Diane Feinstein has fast worked to fulfill a campaign promise to the city's gay community by appointing Supervisor Harry Britt to the San Francisco Police Commission. Daniel has been the first openly gay person to serve on the commission, one of the most influential in city government. "All of departments under mayoral jurisdiction," said Feinstein, "the San Francisco Police Department is my department. By adding a member of the Police Commission we are absolutely crucial to us.

In making the appointment, Feinstein said she was aware that some people felt that a lesbian could not represent the interests of gay men. "I don't share that view," continued Feinstein. The mayor explained that the choice was, in large part, based on political pressure. Because the warm, close relationship, someone I can trust.

Feinstein stated she would have appointed last year's outspoken gay mayoral challenge David Scott to the post but changed her mind when Scott indicated he would have a tough time working with the administration. "He is somebody loyal to this administration, someone I can trust."
