European Council Takes On U.S. Immigration Ban

America's anti-gay immigration law is expected to be challenged as a violation of the Helsinki Accords on Human Rights in a session of Europe's Council of Ministers within the next few weeks. An action from the group would be the sharpest yet by the international community, and would be expected to "generate some movement in the area," U.S. State Department officials said today.

A challenge to the U.S. policy based on the Helsinki document is expected to include an American delegation from "five nations of concern," dealing for the first time with the issue of possible international sanctions against the United States.

The effort in the Council of Europe would be launched by Dutch officials, who have taken the most outspoken stand against the policy, said the officials, according to an aide to the Dutch Embassy in Washington.

"If the Council of Europe were to be formally instructed to support American policies against gay voters, "they would be unacceptable to human rights.," The Dutch delegation called on the United States to comply with the Helsinki document. The Council of Europe is an intergovernmental body that includes the 19 member states of the European Community.

The Dutch government officially issued a formal statement to the American government that it "cannot support American policies against gay policies," an aide to the Dutch embassy said today. The statement was issued in December and was not available for release. The statement was transmitted to the U.S. government by the Dutch delegation to the United Nations in Geneva, an aide said today.

The Dutch effort to challenge the American policy, the first of its kind, is a reflection of the growing international concern over the policy, the Dutch said today. The Dutch, who have taken the lead on the issue, are expected to be joined by other European countries, including the United Kingdom and France.

"We are aware that the United States has taken a strong position on the issue of the Helsinki Accords on Human Rights," the Dutch statement said today. "However, the Helsinki document is a legally binding instrument that all participating states have agreed to respect."

"We are concerned that the U.S. government has taken a position that is contrary to the Helsinki document and is likely to undermine the credibility of the Council of Europe as an instrument to promote human rights," the Dutch statement said. "We believe that the Council of Europe should take a strong stance on this issue and seek to ensure that the Helsinki document is respected and implemented in full."

Carter

The President's policy to expand the gay community, in their jobs not protected by the Civil Service Act is yet to be fought out. That meeting will be held on Thursday, August 15, at the Federal Women's Center.

Text of Carter Letter

Dear Mr. President,

I am writing to you today to express my concern regarding the recent developments in the field of gay rights.

from Dr. Robert L. Spitzer, Chairperson of the APA's Task Force on Mental Health. In the association's Diagnostic and Statistical Manual, the term "homosexuality" was used to describe a disturbance.

However, the APA's Executive Director, Charles Brydon, noted that the term appeared to be generally consistent with the basic view, adopted by psychiatrists, that people have a right and need to change sexual orientations. The APA asked that a committee on homosexuality be formed to address this issue.

Some groups, such as the National Association of Social Workers, have been critical of the use of the term "homosexuality". They argue that it is offensive and stigmatizing.

There are also many gays who have accepted their sexual orientation and have found a sense of community and support. However, they encounter problems, such as discrimination in the workplace and housing.

McKusick: In my practice I find there are such problems. But we have had an incredible amount of support in the community. People have come forward to help us.

Kessler: There's no question that these developments are very encouraging. I think people have now come to acknowledge the fact that people can be gay and still be a full-fledged human being.

Off the Beaten Path

A fire swept through two stories of the San Francisco Women's Building on the Bay Area on February 14.

Judith Brochman, the evening security worker, discovered the first in the second floor Drop-In Room of the building at 9:30 PM. She attempted to put out the flames and was injured when she slammed the glass case to get to the fire extinguisher.

The Fire Department quickly re- sponded to Brochman's call for help. A fire engine pulled up to a fourth floor office by using a fire ladder and then worked to clean the blaze.

At this time it appears that the fire was caused by arson. Police are in- vestigating the cause and so far has not been arrested. There is no sign that anyone is present for such an action.

Some neighborhood residents have also reported seeing a series of fire trucks and the Childcare room and the office of the Third World Women's Alliance were extremely damaged. Firefighters removed 26 windows and broke several doors and walls in the process of putting out the fire.

Damage estimates range from $40,000 and $50,000. The building is covered by fire insurance but in most insurance cases, there may be an insurance deductible. The San Francisco Women's Building has hired Adjustors Associates to assist in obtaining reimbursement for the fire.

Some volunteers have been working around the clock to clear the debris so that the activities held in the building can continue as scheduled. "Women have come in with buckets and rags, and food," said Lulu Lilith, Building Coordinator.

Besides the financial strain, the emo- tional impact of the fire has been felt by the Women's building staff. "But we're trying to turn it into a funding purse," said Lilith.

Donations are desperately needed to help restore the Women's Building to a condition where it can once again serve the community. Tax-deductible donations can be sent to The Women's Building, 14th St. San Francisco, CA 94114. For information call 863-2226, or send a check for labor and skills by joining one of the teams. For further information, call 833-3225.

V.D. Info

Many of the men who use the V.D. prevention team at Health Center #1 are under the impression that regular use of condoms is a method of controlling venereal disease. The only protection against the transmission of venereal diseases is condom use. Dr. Rosita Szender recommends keeping the following points in mind:

1. Know what sexually transmitted diseases are and how to recognize them. For information, call the V.D. Hotline at 431-4440 or 281-4440.

2. Monitor your own body. Do periodic examinations for growths, rashes, ulcers and other signs of infection. Seek medical attention if growths appear.

3. Observe your sexual partner for discharge, growths, rashes or sores. If present, delay sexual contact.

4. Before and after sex, wash hands and genitalia. Urinate as soon as possible after having sex.

5. At least know the name and telephone number of your sexual partner. If you do not plan to see him again, call him.

6. Watch for abnormal signs of infection. If you believe you have an infection, contact the Health Center at 881-2222.

7. Remember that a sexual act is not always complete without being covered by a condom. Use a condom in all sexual acts.

8. Consider the use of condoms ("rubbers") as a preventive measure.

I LOVE MY WIFE

by David Cesar

Laughter, love, and a bit of a puzzle form the show that is about to begin. The audience is invited to share a part of the love and laughter that have come to be expected from this comedyектив.

The play begins with a short monologue by the lead character, who introduces himself and his world. The audience is quickly drawn into the story as the character shares his thoughts and experiences. As the play progresses, the audience is treated to a series of humorous and heartwarming moments that bring the character to life.

The play is a mix of comedy and drama, with moments of tension and surprise that keep the audience on the edge of their seats. The performances by the cast are excellent, and the supporting cast adds depth and richness to the story.

I LOVE MY WIFE is a must-see for anyone who enjoys a good laugh. The play runs through April 6th, so be sure to check your local theater for showtimes and tickets.
