Proposed Bills Would Increase PoliceSpying

Amendments allow police searches of newsrooms, automobiles and medical records

San Francisco—Guerrillas and other California citizens may see a return to police spycraft in public spaces and other such McCarthy-era surveillance tactics if any of several proposed amendments to the state constitution are adopted by the legislature and the governor.

As part of a barrage of anti-crime moves by the legislature, several similar amendments have been introduced. In the House, the bills have been considered as part of the Constitutional Amendment Committee.

In recent years, the California Supreme Court has overturned convictions because the method used by the police to acquire the evidence violated the state constitution's right to privacy. There is no such explicit right in the United States Constitution. As a result, in most cases the police have been able to obtain search warrants in violation of the state constitution's right to privacy. In the past, if the police had been able to obtain search warrants in violation of the state constitution's right to privacy, the evidence obtained could be used in court.

The proposed amendments would require that such warrants be obtained in compliance with the state constitution's right to privacy. If the police had required such warrants, the evidence obtained could not be used in court.

Milk Club Clobbers Baths at 8th and Howard

(San Francisco) Members of the Harvey Milk Gay Democratic Club voted Tuesday night to take action against the Club Baths at 8th and Howard after the Club's request argued successfully for a one year lease and looked for another location. The Club is also considering a move to the Mission in the near future.

The Milk Club intends at the moment to keep the bar's request argued successfully for a one year lease and look for another location. The Club is also considering a move to the Mission in the near future.

Midnight Sun Wins Permit to Move

(San Francisco) After a long and emaciating battle, the City's Planning Commission voted unanimously to allow the Midnight Sun to move to 32nd and Turk, a few blocks north of its current location.

The decision had been delayed a few weeks in order to give the six commission members a chance to review the matter more carefully. The commission was concerned that the move might be in the public interest.

The commission was also concerned that the move might be in the public interest.

New Walk-In Clinic to Open in Castro

The San Francisco Chronicle reported on May 29, 1991, that a walk-in clinic for the Castro area's first openly gay, out-front clinic will open. Dr. Reiff, an anesthesiologist, and a consultant pathologist, the clinic will not limit its services. The Clinic will provide non-emergency medical care for a variety of conditions, including general physical exams, routine check-ups, and minor injuries. The clinic will be open 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Supreme Court Won't Hear Sodomy Case

In a decision that may prove to be a mixed blessing, the Supreme Court declined to hear the Beller v. New York case, which challenged the state's sodomy law. The court's refusal to take the case means that the sodomy law, which bars so-called "deviate sex relations," will remain in effect. The decision may be seen as a setback for those advocating for the rights of sexual minorities, but it also provides a respite for those opposed to such laws. The case has drawn expressions of homophobia in recent memory.

Anderson to Speak in S.F.

Author Edmund White's "In Cold Blood: A Memoir of Murder and Its Aftermath" had been rejected by a publisher. The author wrote to Billie Jean King, who wrote back that she stood by his work. Anderson's book was finally published in a paperback edition by Holt, called Cherry Lane. The book sold well and became a bestseller, and it is now available in a hardback edition. The author has become a prominent voice for gay rights and is often cited as someone who has changed the way society views homosexuality.

John Denver Nixes Gay Novel

John Denver, who had previously expressed support for gay rights, decided not to go ahead with a gay novel. Denver had been in talks with Holt, one of the largest publishers in the United States, to publish a book about his personal life and experiences. However, after learning that the book would be about gay love, Denver decided not to proceed. The decision was met with mixed reactions, with some praising Denver for his courage and others criticizing him for撤退. The novel, which was eventually published by Holt, was a bestseller and is still in print today.

Winning! It's a winning opportunity.

The city of San Francisco is celebrating its 200th anniversary, and the city's athletic clubs are offering special deals for the occasion. One offer includes a trip for two to Hawaii and a week of hotel accommodation. The offer is available through June 30th, and is open to all residents of San Francisco and surrounding areas. The athletic clubs are also offering discounts on gym memberships and other services. It's a great opportunity to get some exercise and celebrate the city's history at the same time.

An hour and a half, and a whole world away.

In the time it takes to get across San Francisco during rush hour, you could be in the heart of the Redwoods basking in the sun.

And in the time it takes to find a parking place downtown, you could have taken a dip in the hot tub, made a new friend or two, and be lounging on the deck at twilight with your favorite drink.

All this for about what it would cost you if you'd parked in a tow-away zone.

Isn't it nice to have such refreshing alternatives?

Sentinel Interview: ARTHUR EVANS

One of the most outspoken gay figures in San Francisco is an Arthur Evans. In the relatively brief history of the contemporary gay liberation movement, Evans stands out as one of the early giants.

He is the author of Witchcraft and the Gay Counter-culture and is one of the founders of the Gay Activist Alliance in New York. In an interview with the Sentinel, Evans gives his candid appraisal of gay politics and culture.

"I think the gay community needs to come together and make a statement," Evans said. "I believe that the gay community has to stop sitting on its heels and start fighting for its rights."}

The San Francisco Opera House
May 29-June 6.
Performance schedule on page 19.

Renee Renouf

What's up for tonight is the opening of the Jeffrey Ballet's seventh season at the San Francisco Opera House, the first of eleven performances featuring no world premieres, but four new to San Francisco, a new production and three revivals of some of its earliest and most memorable works.

For anyone shy of thirty and interested in dance, the Joffrey Ballet has always been there in one form or another. It's as much a balletic staple for those younguns as for those of us whose taste was weaned on the Ballets Russes de Monte Carlo's productions of Coppelia, Swan Lake and Nutcracker Suite.

But there is a difference, obvious and subtle alike, and you can lay it all to those cool tremors of change and tides of taste.

One charming note is that the silver medalist for the junior men's division at the 1979 Jackson International Ballet Competition, Julian Montaner, joined the Joffrey not quite a year ago, after a season or so with Ballet Repertory Company.

For the rest, the punch and vigor of Gary Chryst and Christian Holder will be absent and the Joffrey must rely on Luis Fuentes, one of the few remaining dancers active who were with the reconstituted company in 1965. Trinette Singleton is still with the Joffrey organization, but in an administrative capacity.

There are two other localities with the company, in a manner of speaking. Two of the fair-haired boys (but dark brown of scalp if you have to be physically accurate and technical about it) of San Francisco Ballet's managerial staff joined the Joffrey organization last summer; Joseph Hartney (Wharton School of Business) and...
