Companies Wait It Out
Concern Stalls Antibody Test
by John Wetzl

Federal officials considering for approval two antibody tests, developed by two of five competing companies, will overshoot their projected target date for approval of Feb. 15, a Food and Drug Administration spokesman said Tuesday.

Officials in government and industry speculate the delay may be related to controversy over the test's accuracy and usefulness in local government, though FDA officials said approval could still come "some time in February."

Concern over local criticism of the test has prompted FDA Commissioner Frank E. Young to schedule a high-level meeting Feb. 22 to discuss the issue.

Competition in the private sector has been strong over this market, sweetened by the attractive annual revenue projections of between $80 million and $120 million in gross sales to blood banks alone. And some of the players, it turns out, are some of America's most powerful corporations -- most of which have little experience in the development of this type of product.

日电 The $36 billion plastics and chemicals giant, agreed to a $4.5 million total outlay on controlling stock to rush blood banks alone. And some of the players, it turns out, are some of America's most powerful corporations -- most of which have little experience in the development of this type of product.

It depends also on how long the other two or three are delayed. Most companies felt the margin by which one company proceeds another in its research was pivoted.

Litton Industries, another corporate giant, commissioned its wholly owned subsidiary Litton-Bionetics, Inc. to produce the test. Litton spokesman Kay Noble rebufled any implications that Litton's rapid movement in developing the test may be partly to blame for the potential marketing of an inadequate test.

"We really don't have a reaction to that. All we are trying to do is to develop a test that is accurate and that will...stop the spread of this damned virus. As far as we're concerned the sooner the better. We'd like to get it moving.

Noble said the accuracy of the Litton test was "higher than the figures I've been reading around. The FDA is quite pleased with our results."

Du Pont's Schriber described the DuPont test as being accurate in 15 percent of the cases. The tests are all considered to be similar in reliability with a 16 percent margin of potential false negative readings and a six percent margin of potential false positives.

Electronucleons industrial relations officer Richard Abajian told Sentinel USA his company will benefit from receiving approval sooner. "It could cause some competitive advantage I would think, yes."

Sierra Club Backs Off by John Wetzl

Gay and lesbian environmentalists have become angered at the refusal Monday by the Sierra Club to sanction gay-oriented social outings. A new group of Club members has called the traditionally pro-gay organization's internal homophobia, and says gay men and lesbians may be moving away from the naturalist club because of it.

The group says its activities would "educate members and others in knowledge and proper appreciation of the mountains, forests, deserts, seashore, and other natural features of the country. Any chapter member is welcome."

Opposition members on the San Francisco Bay Chapter's Executive Committee, however, called the gay proposal "divisive." Orgy wording of the gay group, which calls itself "Gay and Lesbian Sierra-rans or GALS," vowed in a meeting Tuesday night to fight what they see as the exclusion of their group.

"They're afraid we're going to try to make the Sierra Club a voice for gay rights," said member Wick Kenney.

"They're also scared of donor reaction -- that people are going to leave the Sierra Club and not give the Sierra Club any money.

GALS members expressed disappointment at Sierra Club national President Michelle Perrault's decision to attend the San Francisco Bay Chapter meeting to speak out against their proposal.

The most outspoken opponent of the group's proposal, John Pachl, wrote in a February 7 , 1985, communiqué, "A gay/lesbian section will be the first step toward the institutionalized factionalization of the Chapter and Club along lines of race, sex, or separatist, or have no relevance to the purposes of the Club."

"We're not trying to educate the Sierra Club on gay issues, we're trying to educate gay and lesbian men and women on environmental issues," said Steven Griffiths, who has been selected by a new Task Force on developing inclusion of gay and other minorities. The task force was created just after the GALS proposal was dropped.

The Sierra Club was founded in 1892 by a small group of environmentalists including naturalist John Muir who began taking members to Yosemite to learn about the appreciation for preserving the wilderness environment.

The club has now achieved national membership of over 350,000 members; the San Francisco Bay Chapter has 7,000.

The debate will continue as to just how gay and lesbians would be included in Sierra Club social activities, but for now gay and lesbian members will be able to find home in the club's existing groups.

Said Haller, "We would speculate that if really happens the majority might be satisfied, but it hasn't so far."
AIDS Foundation Must Move

By David Lammle

Moving day is close at hand for the AIDS Foundation, and all that is needed now is a place to move to. Speaking at a meeting last week, Holly Smith explains that the Foundation must vacate space at 34 Third Street by April 15, because it is no longer fit for occupancy and is threatening the referral agency that occupies the space on the second floor and half of the third floor. Smith says he feels the space back by March 31, although negotiations are underway to extend the lease for another month or so.

The AIDS Foundation has had several temporary moves since it's first headquarters, Hol-Mirth's volunteers. This move to a new space is not a physical one—the space is between 6,700 and 8,000 square feet of office space. "It can be split up into two floor levels. It can be split up into two levels. SF Gay Leaders Plan Spring March
by David Lamble
Frightened by the new agenda, some San Franciscans are literally triumphant "Teflon" President and by feelings that the country is drifting to the right economically and toward war in Central America, an historic coalition of new-old left, ethnic minority and labor leaders have joined forces, under the leadership of Preservation Action Committee and the National Gay Task Force, to enter into a new stage of the national political struggle.

The coalition, called "Operation Round Up," is a new and unique campaign to provide a counteroffensive to Ronald Reagan. The coalition will address the April 20 San Francisco ballot "measure, as yet undetermined, to be able to meet our needs at home, as long as our needs aren't met at work; and to bring the rights of all people in the United States, including the rights of gay men and women, to the forefront of political debate.

Howard Wallace

President of the National Gay Task Force and leader of the National Gay Task Force's Action Committee, Howard Wallace has been a leader in the gay movement since the mid-1960s, when he was a student at the University of Wisconsin. He is the author of "The New Gay Movement" and "The Gay Power Agenda," and has been a leading political activist in the gay movement for over 20 years.

Wallace is known for his outspoken and uncompromising advocacy of gay rights and equality. Part III
Getting Paid for It
A Primer on Financial Assistance
by Robert Haas

How would you support yourself if you became too sick to work? If you're like many gay men, you probably don't know, and don't want to think about it. If you're a Person With AIDS (PWA), who’s lost both his job and his ability not thinking about it. You’ve got to know.

Many people think that their company will bail them out if they become unable to work. However, companies often terminate employees for AIDS, thus cutting off unemployment benefits, and adding another source of stress to their lives.

Steven Pratt

The best insurance against loss of job and income, according to Steven Pratt, Director of Social Services for the San Francisco AIDS Foundation, is taking out your own long-term disability insurance. Simply stated, this is a plan that pays a portion of your income while you are disabled.

Many private disability plans are available, but only a few have become disabled, just as can be purchased. Pratt, who is a former state health insurance program lawyer, says there is a great variety of benefits.

AIDS Insurance is also now available in California. It's cheaper than disability insurance, costing $17.50 a month, but up to $17,000 a year. However, it only covers disability from AIDS. Recently advertised disability plans for AIDS insurance have begun to appear in local newspapers.

What is a disability? Under current disability insurance, most PWA's are eligible for benefits if they're on Social Security Disability Insurance or Social Security Disability Income programs (see sidebar). Attempting to get these benefits on your own is almost always frustrating, even if you're not good at it. There's a number of places where you can get more information on AIDS benefits, such as the social services department or an AIDS organization.

The ABC's of Government Assistance

Those needing financial assistance should call the SF AIDS Foundation Social Services Department (644-4746) to set up an appointment. The Foundation has initial application forms for all the programs described below, with the exception of veteran's benefits. By working through the Foundation, applicants avoid the inconvenience of traveling to many different departments or area hospitals, the usual consequence of applying for these benefits. The Foundation is an information and referral service for all those who need assistance. It serves as an information and referral service to the Foundation for food and clothing, social security worker, three student in¬

"Look for a private disability program that pays benefits regardless of your income," says Steven Pratt. Bush expects more liberal definitions of "disability" to be adopted in the near future.

Good news comes with bad news. The remarkable progress has been made by researchers in determining the genetic code for the AIDS virus. More good news is that there is already a vaccine being developed and may be available within the year.

However, the potential risks are significant. Any vaccine must be tested thoroughly to ensure that it will not cause harm to those who receive it. Furthermore, the vaccine will only prevent the spread of the virus, not cure it.

The difficulties in developing a vaccine are compounded by the fact that there is still no cure for AIDS. Researchers are working on developing treatments that can slow the progression of the disease, but a cure remains elusive.

Majestic Bruckner

T he most recent gift from the San Francisco Symphony has given its city the brassy, church organ crescendo of a bracingly joyous and loopy-voiced Bach. The orchestra has played Bruckner's music as if it were a secular symphony, full of spirit and life.

The conductor here is Daniel Barenboim, who has a reputation for his ability to convey the inner life of a piece. The orchestra under his direction was vibrant, energetic, and deeply committed to Bruckner's music. The musicians were energized and engaged, and the music was played with a sense of excitement and vitality.

The program included a new work by John Adams, entitled "The Wound," which was commissioned for the occasion. The piece was a tour de force, with a powerful and driving rhythmic structure. The orchestra played it with great energy and intensity, and the audience was captivated by the performance.

The orchestra's performance of Bruckner's Symphony No. 9 was particularly memorable. The music had a rich and full sound, with a clear sense of the composer's intentions. The conductor's conducting was sensitive and precise, and the musicians played with a sense of passion and commitment.

The program also included works by Brahms and Beethoven, which were played with the same level of intensity and musicality. The orchestra's performance was a testament to the excellence of its musicians and the leadership of its conductor.

Overall, the performance was a triumph, and the audience was left with a sense of excitement and joy. The orchestra's performance was a highlight of the season, and it is sure to be remembered as a memorable event in the history of San Francisco Symphony.

Beloved and God: The Story of Hadrian & Antinous by Rosyton Lambert

Viking Press, 298 pp $19.95

One day in the shining sunlight of late summer, I found myself at the Forum. The splendor of Hadrian's architecture was overwhelming. In the ancient ruins, I began to think about the love between Hadrian and Antinous, and how it grew beyond what was expected. The love of these two men was unlike anything I had ever seen before. It was a love that transcended the limitations of time and space. Antinous was a young man, aged between eighteen and twenty. He was athletic in build, with a massive chest, hair that was unusual and poignant beauty. Hadrian, on the other hand, was an older man, with a beard that seemed to wear the years.

As Lambert explains in his foreword, although the image of Antinous as a young lover has been prevalent, there has been a lack of scholarly treatment of his life. Lambert is careful to place the relationship between Hadrian and Antinous in the context of the Hellenic world, where such relationships began very much along the lines of the traditional eroto-erotic love of the ancients. The relationship between Hadrian and Antinous had been influenced by the portraits and statues found in the gardens with marble busts lined up like a military parade. Toward the back, among the statues of generals and goddesses, you will find statues of Antinous as Vertumnus, which is a breathtaking pagan is doing a stone's throw in the Vatican collection. There is a case for Antinous as Vertumnus, that Antinous was the lover of the emperor Hadrian. It is said that Antinous was the one who cultivated the love of Hadrian for Antinous at a time when Christianity was just beginning to spread throughout the Empire—established a cult of Antinous—at a time when Christianity was just beginning to spread throughout the Empire—established a cult of Antinous, whose Golden Age had already passed. Much more complex is the theory that Antinous was the one who cultivated the love of Hadrian for Antinous at a time when Christianity was just beginning to spread throughout the Empire—established a cult of Antinous, whose Golden Age had already passed. TALES OF THE SOUTH OF MARKET

He was a young man who had grown up in the Midwest. He had always felt like he didn't belong anywhere. He felt like he was an outsider, always outside of the mainstream. He was always looking for a place where he could fit in, a place where he could belong.

One day, on the Sunday before his birthday, he decided to travel to San Francisco. He had heard about the city and its vibrant culture, and he was curious to see it for himself. He knew that it was a city of contrasts, with its history of gold rush and its present-day high-tech industry.

As he walked through the streets of San Francisco, he was struck by the diversity of the people he saw. He met people from all over the world, each with their own unique story and perspective. He felt like he was finally in a place where he could be accepted.

As he explored the city, he stumbled upon an area called South of Market. It was a place he had heard about but never visited before. He found it to be a place of contrasts, with its mix of old and new, its blend of culture and commerce.

He met people in South of Market who were just like him, people who were looking for something different. He found a sense of belonging in this place, and he knew that he had found his home.

He stayed in South of Market for a few months, exploring the area and meeting people. He learned a lot about the city and its history, and he felt like he was finally in a place where he belonged.

Eventually, he decided to move back to the Midwest. He missed his family and friends, and he knew that he needed to be closer to them. But he knew that he would always have a special place in his heart for South of Market, a place where he had found a sense of belonging.
