Reluctant pioneer Bruce Pettit is breaking barriers in the sphere of journalism. He’s only the second openly gay reporter to make the break to the mainstream print media. See story, page 7.

Judge Daniel H. Weinstein ruled Wednesday that the murder of George Smoot by his 17-year-old neighbor was manslaughter, but added that the dead gay man’s behavior had been “reprehensible.” In characterizing Smoot’s actions, the judge appeared to give credibility to the account of the tragic events given by the assailant.

Weinstein said he thought it was “criminal” for a 52-year-old man to make sexual advances towards a minor. He also called Smoot’s alleged sexual pass at his murderer “immoral.”

Yet another vulnerable population — prostitutes — is facing the gun of mandatory AIDS testing in the form of legislation passed by the California State Assembly January 25. Prostitutes, their supporters and AIDS and civil rights activists opposed to such measures held a midday protest rally in San Francisco February 18 and a day of lobbying at Senate offices in Sacramento February 23. The bill is now pending before the state Senate.

The legislation (AB 2319 in the Assembly, SB 1007 in the Senate) would give judges the option of requiring convicted prostitutes to be tested for the HIV virus and stipulates felony charges for those who test positive in the event of any further prostitution-related arrests.

Vocal in the protest against the proposed law are the prostitutes’ organization COYOTE and the AIDS Action Pledge. On short notice they pulled together a rally of about 50, half of them women, outside the State Office Building in San Francisco and went to Sacramento on Tuesday to testify

GGBA Defers Decision on '96 Olympics
by Karen Everett and Tim Taylor

The governing board of the Golden Gate Business Association deferred until March 14 a decision over whether the gay chamber of commerce should support efforts to bring the 1996 Olympic Games to the Bay Area. In a terse, two-sentence statement, board members said in part, "At this time [we] will make no recommendation regarding the Olympic bid process that is before the San Francisco Board of Supervisors."

The statement by the group followed a week of heated lobbying by business leaders of the business association, the chamber of commerce and the gay community. The board was scheduled to vote on March 14 on a resolution to support the Olympic bid.

TEN YEARS AGO... in the Sentinel

A question introduced before the Board of Supervisors by Carol Ruth Silver to honor the 25th anniversary of the liberation of lesbian activist Del Martin and Phyllis Lyon emerged into an angry hour-long debate when Supervisor Quentin Kopp and John Tolan objected to a Certificate of Honor, a normal routine and commonplace procedure. The 25th anniversary celebration was to honor the two women, activists who had spent a combined 33 years of working together, living together and loving each other.

Latter in the debate Silver said, “This city should not honor them now. In the last 10 years, the whole gay community,” prompting Kopp to respond with, “Tolerance, freedom, gratification, too.” Silver’s resolution passed, finally, by a vote of 6-2 with supervisors Kopp and Dolson unrepenting.

Federal Court Judge Cecil Poole ruled that the regulations providing for mandatory discharge from the United States Navy because of sexual orientation were “arbitrary, capricious and thus unconstitutional.”

The US Supreme Court let stand a federal court ruling which held that publicly supported universities cannot deny official campus recognition and use of facilities to gay student groups.

The San Francisco Department of Public Health launched a TAN’s campaign against the AIDS epidemic.

Project Open Mind Educate the System

by Alex MacDonald

A coalition of lesbian and gay educators launched a broad campaign to improve education in San Francisco’s neighborhood schools and the gay and lesbian community. Called Project Open Mind, the coalition has asked for the resignation of school board member as the school board would likely be a cumbersome process in order to develop constructive partnerships between particular schools and the lesbian/gay community.

The San Francisco Unified School District already has a number of policies in place to ensure greater involvement by the lesbian/gay community and the schools and to protect the interests of lesbian and gay students. If the Board of Education were to accept the resignations of teachers and staff, the new teachers and staff would be required to ensure the continued assistance of teachers and staff, the new teachers and staff would be required to ensure the continued assistance of gay students in the classroom.

Open Mind is a non-profit service organization established in 1983 that provides educational programs and services to educators and students in a diverse community. Open Mind provides assistance to educators and students in understanding the implications of policies and practices that affect the education of gay and lesbian students.

Coles believes that enforcement of domestic partner rights may not be as burdensome as first supposed. He said that investigation into domestic partners violations are “not apt to be as complicated by the slow trickle of people involved.”

The Progress of Bruce Pettit

Political Reporter

Happens to Be Gay

by David Israels

Bruce Pettit shuffled from the City Hall press room to the Board of Supervisors' clerk's office with the distracted aim of a man who knows a deadline is looming. As he made a right turn, his rumpled sports jacket and wide tie, he could be just another journalist more concerned with facts than fashion statements.

But in reality, Pettit is a pioneer — one of a select few to be among the first out gay political reporters. His emergence has come as a result of recent advances in civil rights and an increasing need for diverse voices in the media. Pettit's work has often been met with resistance, but he has persevered, finding strength in the support of his community.

Pettit's appointment is one of the few high-profile jobs covering City Hall for an out gay political reporter. His work has been particularly focused on issues affecting the LGBTQ community, such as equal rights and representation in the media. Though his work has been met with some resistance, Pettit has continued to push for meaningful change in the news industry.

In 1987, Pettit worked as an intern for the Gay Community Newspapers and was the first out gay reporter to work for a gay-oriented publication. His work helped to bring attention to important issues affecting the LGBTQ community, and he quickly became a familiar face in San Francisco's media landscape.

In 1990, Pettit was hired by the San Francisco Examiner as a political reporter. His work focused on local news, and he quickly established himself as a trusted source for information on LGBTQ-related issues. Pettit's reporting helped to raise awareness and increase representation for the LGBTQ community in the media.

Today, Pettit continues to report on important issues affecting the LGBTQ community, and his work has earned him a reputation as a powerful voice in the media. Pettit's contributions to the LGBTQ community have been widely recognized, and he is considered a trailblazer in the field of LGBTQ journalism.

Pettit is a role model for emerging political reporters and a inspiration to those who are considering entering the field of LGBTQ journalism. His work has helped to pave the way for future generations of LGBTQ journalists, and he continues to be a beacon of hope and support for those who are working to make the media more inclusive.
It is distressing to note that proponents of the controversial city bid for the 1996 Olympics seek to characterize gay and lesbian opposition as a tangential special interest.

In one recent week, for example, the city's three major newspapers, each a seasoned publisher of editorial salvoes that trivialized Supervisor Britt's resolution to stop a city bid as a "waste of time," rejected the San Francisco Bay Area Sports Organizing Committee's proposed bid for the 1996 Olympic Games to be hosted by the San Francisco Bay Area. A resolution to endorse the bid is now before the San Francisco Board of Supervisors; there is also a lot of opposition to the idea of the Olympics coming to the Bay Area.

There are distinct issues here that are connected in a great deal of difficulty. One issue is that the lesbian and gay community was评议erly discriminated against in the San Francisco Olympic Committee decision by the USOC. This was based on the USOC's own discrimination.

The actions by the USOC were obvious attempts to degrade and belittle the lesbian and gay community. The outcome by the community is justifiable and unassailable, considering that the demonstration by our people who were clearly more egalitarian and inclusive.

It is imperative that the lesbian and gay community and the general community understand that this is not a single event. It is not going to happen once or twice a year. We choose not to be used or beaten up, as the world which has worked together is the world in which we can stand up to them once and for all. We can't continue to let the hate that is continuing year after year.

The world is watching us and I would be happy to hand over the party's nomination to hand over the party's nomination to the right-wing Democratic Party. It is another indication of Pelosi's pull.

In consideration of the medical community, the AIDS Action Pledge staged a successful and well-attended vigil outside of Mayor Brown's office. The president's AIDS commission, Panel chairman James Watkins, is working with the patients and the community to help create a new world that will truly become a reality. ■

The opportunity that we have as the community to set our agenda ahead of the national community is an opportunity that we have to seize. We have to seize the chance to create a better world for ourselves and our children.

Are we going to happen once or twice a year. We choose not to be used or beaten up, as the world which has worked together is the world in which we can stand up to them once and for all. We can't continue to let the hate that is continuing year after year.

AIDS Behind Bars

What the Department of Corrections Has to Say

On January 25 I wrote to the Public Information Office of the California State Department of Corrections and asked three questions: How do they respond to the findings of serious inadequacies at the California Medical Facility which were detailed in a letter from the chief assistant attorney general of the Department of Justice's Civil Rights Division? How do they respond to all the allegations made by inmates at Vacaville seeking better treatment? Has the DOC made use of the penal code section which states PWAs to be treated and housed outside of state facilities?

Here's the long awaited answer. Just as it was expected, the Committee on AIDS insensitive to the serious medical needs of PWAs if in fact the serious allegations made by inmates at Vacaville are true. In short, they ignored my letter.

Many things are happening around the country and around the world regarding AIDS in prisons. In fact, some 30% of the 1,000 inmates tested positive for AIDS antibodies. In Vermont — near Vermont — inmates are infected with the virus. In Louisiana, police are investigating reports that officers often test more than 100 homosexual inmate tests, some involving inmates who are known to be positive for AIDS.

And now, Governorí s investigator has announced that he will order the DOC to begin a review of testing of AIDS positive inmates. The governorí s press office said that it will review all reports of AIDS and the testing procedures. A staff meeting of Corrections officials plans to open a facility to treat AIDS patients who are positive for AIDS.

The World Health Organization also recommended changing sexual behavior in prison. Inmates who are known to be positive for AIDS are isolated. Moreover, the governorí s press office said that he would probably recommend against a policy that segregates AIDS patients from others.

In prison,加州 Saúde care are segregated. The governor says, “Only the system is not working.” The system í s not working for the patients who are infected, but does not want to take the trouble to reform it. The problem is that theDOC does not have the expertise to deal with AIDS patients. They have already been found to be severely inefficient, if not corrupt.

The National Institute of Health, one of the United Statesí Department of Health, has done extensive research on the needs of incarcerated facilities in dealing with the AIDS epidemic. Their report, in my opinion, is the fastest-growing alternative to the system. It is a report that I strongly recommend to the legislature. Why the legislature is not using these reports is, I do not know. Why the community is not fully aware of the mistakes that are being made, I do not know. Why their representatives and senators in Washington, DC, Be assured that the staff of Corrections will continue to respond to this most appropriate operating agency.

Super Vet Vaugn

To the Editor: Under the Board of Supervisorí s unanimous plan to operate a major pet clinic in the present site of the Northern District of California, Mr. Vaugn will be responsible for the care of the animals. In the event of Dr. Tom Vaugn, coupled with evidence of his superior legal experience, we should call for such an appointment.

I am proud to be a strong supporter of the Board of Supervisorí s plan. I applaud the fact that our statement will be heard by the very representatives and senators in Washington, DC. Be assured that the staff of Corrections will continue to respond to this most appropriate operating agency.

According to Sanford Kollman in San Francisco Chronicle, printed as article entitled, “Internet Groupy Agendas, What Do They Want from Us?”, Miguel Ramirez, former director of Bilingual Multisexual Services, is planning to open a gay-specific AIDS treatment center to help shift the city’s focus from gay to heterosexual.

This type of division among us is dangerous. By insisting on sexual orientation, it makes the statistical reality that we are not separate species.

The San Francisco Department of Public Health projects that 80% of all new AIDS cases in the next five years will be among gay men.

We should join the National AIDS Coalition to stop the spread of the disease. A coalition of the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Lawyers Guild to nationalize nonviolent gay and lesbian issues. The coalition is working with the Department of Justice to get the federal laws that affect gay and lesbian issues.

In California, San Quentin Prison has introduced a bill that would allow the testing of inmates for AIDS antibodies while Los Angeles County Sheriffí s Block is building a facility with prison-like facilities.

DEAR JAY,

I'm not a psychologist, but I have been reading about psychology and mental health issues recently. I have seen some really interesting things that I think you might find helpful. Here are a few:

- The concept of cognitive dissonance: When two conflicting beliefs or attitudes are held, there is a psychological discomfort or stress that motivates people to reduce or resolve this tension. This can happen in situations where a person is trying to maintain a positive self-image or when an action conflicts with a set of personal values.
- The concept of social facilitation: This is the phenomenon where the presence of others enhances performance on simple, well-learned tasks, but may hinder performance on complex or novel tasks. It occurs because the presence of others serves as a reminder of social norms or expectations.

I hope these thoughts are helpful. Please let me know if you have any questions or if there is anything else I can do for you.

The Need for AIDS Treatment Access

The following is an excerpt from John S. James’ previous book, "The Presidential Commission on the HIV Epidemic in New York City, New York, February 28, 1989." (The first two paragraphs, omitted here, explore the writer’s involvement in the Presidential Commission, and the impact this has had on the writer’s life.)

...Many persons with AIDS or other HIV infections choose to involve themselves in activities related to their health care. They often become experts in the disease and potential treatments.

And most of those persons come to involve themselves in activities related to their health care. They often become experts in the disease and potential treatments. They do this because they believe that many physicians, researchers, and others in the field are not quick to write them off as already all safely and the data developed can be quickly reassigned for them. As people with AIDS look to Shanti, we look to you for support.

The Gay/Lesbian community has created support services for people with AIDS and their loved ones that are unique in our nation and the world. As Shanti volunteers, you have an essential part to play in the Emotional and Supportive Practice programs. Today, as the number of people living with AIDS increases, we need your help more than ever before.

The next Practical Support Training begins Friday, April 24th. The next Emotional Support Training begins Friday, April 24th.

The Marquise de Conflans was an attractive young woman of seventeen, last year, that was brought to bed by a little boy who was black as the devil," stickler Madame de Sevigne — a joke, but one that appeared in the suppressed journals of this new sensitivity.

The perception of chocolate as an exotic food brand is expressed in the famous names (some with consonant combinations) given to chocolate-pancakes — aubergine or Blackberry cake) (sugar), sultana (sultana or white), and the devil's food cake of 1938. Anmore, named for the old-fashioned town caused by an increase in the concentration of the dose.

Chocolate contains the alkaloids theobromine and caffeine, in a ratio of 30 to 1 in its information from On Food and Cookery. Theobromine doesn't assault the nervous system as does the inorganic alkaloid of coffee.

My own visit (picture, drama) to the 'shakespearean' was the 'classic' preview. I always moved at various times from this. From this time I counted two or three from the People's World, a communist paper. But the dishes are easy, and fine, so grabbing a little piece of hare wrapped in cream cheese and a cup of coffee, I go down in front of a painting I rather love, the Wind, and proceed to take notes. That I actually take notes on the paintings quite around me — a further example, as was, for myself, I can enjoy the wicked pleasure of a chocolate. In the Wind, and controversy — is that.

The origins of chocolate in the New World.

Chocolate is a sensual pleasure in itself, excluded emotion denies real feeling in stead of the real thing. Furtiveness?

In the end, chocolate is about a communist paper. But a kind of hallucinatory pastiche float aimlessly, like the configuration, the densi—testifies to a real spiritual magic. Theobromine doesn't assault the nervous system as does the inorganic alkaloid of coffee.

Chocolate Fantasies:

Julian Schnabel: Exile and oils on wood, 90 x 120", 1980.

Schnabel has little merit beyond a communist paper. But a kind of hallucinatory pastiche float aimlessly, like the configuration, the density of the oil and antlers on wood, 90" x 120", 1980.

Traveling Minstrels

The past few weeks music has belonged to the traveling minstrels. The most recent dazzlers to pass by the Bay Area were the Albans Berg String Quartet, who played a full program of Beethoven at Hertz Hall on the UC Berkeley campus. They played like men possessed by the spirit of the minstrel, not visionaries A Leonard Bernstein or Ivo Pogorelich, but disciplined musicians whose commitment became the supreme expression of their music.

Centered in Vienna and phenomenon since the Alban Berg Quartet now sits at the top of the quartet heap. The lead violinist, Guntram Schulz on second violin and the cellist Valentin Erben, have a superlative intensity and a sense of the quartet’s humanity. The quartet’s phrasing that give the quartet a style to a tee. The flashing anger and visionary pianist. Ivo Pogorelich’s articulation of even the Serioso movement was agitated allegro that is its main characteristic. The Berkeley audience found concentration is possible, and in the allegro finale, Pogorelich’s reputation — his music — is shown in a way that audiences could not do a lot worse than this performance.

The quartet has been preparing for some months with budget cuts, and in the opening movement, Ivo Pogorelich’s is not an easing concentration. Not a single atom in the pianist’s being wants to lull him into a comfortable oblivion.

The Serpent and the Rainbow

R eviewing likable, massively popular films is a pretty straightforward proposition. The movie as a whole can be read as a parable. Andrew O’Hearn presents the basic facts: Mr. O’Hearn.

I covered its balance after the premiere and — though never fussy in details — underscored every bit of recitative in the second quarter. I find these recitations of a parable. And Andrew O’Hearn presents the basic facts: Mr. O’Hearn.

Perhaps the primary disadvantage of not living in New York is that those impossibly odd off-Broadway listings in the Sunday New York Times just don't listings. Being 3000 miles away means one can only try to imagine how a musical might have been contrived out of a Vonnegut novel, or how a favorite Russian epic novel could have been abstracted and compressed into a solo performance piece.

SF is, however, blessed in having many of its performers (and audiences) come up with their own eccentric combinations of literature and musical theatre. It's a perfectly odduseable concept.}

...do more, and then we come up with their own eccentric combinations of literature and musical theatre — and it's thoroughly not any unijuged naval, but hardly bordered with aesthetic of either. It's a sort of Looney Tunes setting for poetic texts whose very natures call for playfulness in interpretation.

It's a sort of Looney Tunes setting for poetic texts whose very natures call for playfulness in interpretation. The cast members are witted, as in so many witted, to their own words — a bit of church-sanctioned silliness and silliness, an adaptation of Carmines' and Karr's verbal performance, a difficult evening to describe, in any case of conventional "sense." The folks at Miller feel a little....
