Hats Off to Easter

Empress Lily Street presided over the seventh annual parade of Easter bonnets, an extravaganza on the Western Addition alley that bears her name. It was hats galore as contestants vied for the honor of winning the prize for most imaginative creation. This year’s winner sported a Faberge egg that, when opened, contained a bird in a gilded cage. A few of the views from the event are above.

Rights Agency Investigates

Job Bias Alleged at Shanti Project

by Charles Linebarger

The San Francisco Human Rights Commission has filed a formal complaint against the Shanti Project, alleging the nonprofit agency assisting people with AIDS discriminates against women and ethnic minorities.

The complaint, which was in response to allegations by “numerous” current and former unidentified employees, was filed on March 30 on behalf of the commission “to ascertain Shanti’s compliance with the nondiscrimination...requirements” of city law, according to Norm Nickens of the Human Rights Commission. Nickens added that the commission will be conducting an investigation at Shanti during the next three weeks before issuing a report.

Nickens said that when the Human Rights Commission receives allegations of discrimination by nonprofit agencies or private firms in San Francisco, the commission will file a formal complaint against that agency or firm “if there was enough there for us to take a second look, particularly with city-funded agencies.”

Added Nickens, “And if we have information that city-funded agencies are not meeting their contractual obligations, we would definitely investigate.” According to San Francisco officials, Shanti receives a million dollars annually in city funds.

Asked how serious the complaint against Shanti was, Nickens responded, “I think any formal action by the commission is serious.”

Why Support John Burton?

"John Burton stands a case of being partial to special interests. And it matters, because, as a former labor lawyer and now a State Senator, John Burton has a knack for fighting for people...and win. He's great at Bght for people...and win. That's why I support him, and I think you should too."

-Barbara Boxer  T'S House of Representatives

"We cannot afford to wait until after the Nov. 4th election to make a contribution for John Burton's special interest. He's tried to keep his chief opponent at arm's length maintaining a low profile. In fact, he's chosen to step back, take a breather, and regroup before stepping out into the political fray again."

-Rick Pacurar  California Teamsters

"John has been there for me as a feminist long before it was popular to be one. He's a leader in the fight for reproductive freedom before abortion was legal; John was one of two tickets in the 1970 Assembly election on the Equal Rights Amendment which burned legal service and women's right to abortion and birth control."

-Catherine Dodd  R.N.

"A person with AIDS, I believe the support that you can give them is tremendous. John Burton has been a leader in the fight against AIDS with his AIDS Task Force."

-Larry Francis  President of Project AID

-Tim Foster  S.F. Right to Know Commissioner & Founder of Alex B. John Merced Dems Club

"Being an activist for a community is important, but being an activist for all communities is imperative in the diverse 16th Assembly District. John Burton has shown a unique ability to understand which people were most in trouble and how to bring together a coalition effective in dealing with their problems, be it the problems of the AIDS crisis or the desperate situation in the Barrow. John turns talk into action."

-Don Ward  Police & FBI, San Francisco

"I have worked on AIDS public policy in the State and Federal level for over five years. We now have 42 AIDS bills pending in Sacramento. John Burton has the political skills and experience to fight the many battles ahead."

Nuts to 'Nut & Honey'

Cereal Advertisements Labeled Antigay

by George S. Buse

The scene is set in cattle country, and the hungry cowboys are heading for the chuck wagon for morning chow. One of them asks what's for breakfast. The grizzled cook sheepishly replies, "Nuttin', honey," imitating the blackface comic Minstrel Show skit. The cowboy commercial for Nuts to "Nut & Honey" was out of tune, but that another official would be hired to discuss the matter later in the week.

CAMPF is being supported by other gay and lesbian groups and individuals around the country who are not members of the coalition against the Nut & Honey commercials. The Chicago board of trade and Nuts to "Nut & Honey" group's different advertisements were made in response to the influx of foreign agricultural products. The America's Best Program is structured to encourage buying American, to help "Save Lives." America's Best has a partial list of recipients that includes Catholic Advocates for Lesbian and Gay Rights, AIDS and Lesbian and Gay Democratic Club, the Chicago Public Library, the Chicago Women's Health Center, and the Independent Precinct Workers. CAMFP's workshops are open to anyone interested in learning about lesbian and gay issues, and the organization is non-partisan. The National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, in its struggle against the epidemic, must collect 600,000 signatures to place the initiative on the ballot. Given the shortage of volunteers for the initiative campaign, most signatures must be collected by paid circulators. Others are gathered by even more expensive means such as newspaper ads and targeted mailing. The idea of a tax credit initiative developed last fall when leaders of LGBT community action groups realized that there is a strong groundswell of support for initiatives that would provide tax credits to people who are not registered to vote. Pabich said, "The AIDS policy proposals rather than the tax credit initiative is in line with the momentum for change that has been building among the gay and lesbian community. The AIDS policy is geared toward the immediate needs of people living with AIDS, whereas the tax credit is a long-term solution that would provide a tax credit to people who are not registered to vote. AIDS Initiative Faces Uphill Battle

by Alex MacDonald

Organizers of the AIDS Research Tax Credit Initiative, hoping to avoid the loss of $30 million for the initiative, said to call this week for more money and volunteers to gather the signatures needed to place the initiative on the ballot.

The initiative would generate $60 million a year for three years to give California residents a tax credit for voluntary contributions to a special fund dedicated to AIDS research. "It's possible," San Francisco organizer John Johnston said. "It will be a Dutchman's deal. This is the first time that the gay community has put forward, and people don't understand that it's not something to be an initiative on the ballot.

To qualify, the initiative must be signed by 410,000 registered California voters before May 8. The campaign, which has already raised $75,000, could be delayed because they come from people who are not registered to vote. Given the shortage of volunteers for the initiative, the campaign will be collected by paid circulators. Others are gathered by even more expensive means such as newspaper ads and targeted mailing. Gay Rescue Mission Helps Society's Outcasts

by George Mendelsohn

While many people are preparing to begin a day's work, a group of homeless gays are forming a line at the Gay Rescue Mission on Folsom Street. "What is wrong with the parks? I should walk through the doors of the mission before noon to have some coffee, visit with friends and work. The facility may be "tacky" by some standards, but it offers warmth to the poor.

The mission's founder, Lenda Donald, Jackson, says, "Many of the homeless are tired and hungry and need a place to hang out. The mission is open from 6 AM to 10 PM. It's a place where people can come and feel welcome." The Gay Rescue Mission is a place to socialize, hang out or just along without being hassled by the authorities. Jackson is the manager of the mission. He is a gay man and he understands the need for a place like this one. Lesbians and Gays Play Major Role in Protests by Tede Matthews

When President Reagan sent 3,300 U.S. troops to Honduras on March 16, 1981, to aid the anti-communist Contras, it was the largest American military incursion into a Central American nation since the Korean War, and an unprovoked one. This swift mobilization was due to a fostering disaster with the administration's hawkish moves towards the Central American peace process.

One of the most critical decisions of the administration's foreign policy was the sending of troops to Honduras. This decision was made without consulting the Congress, and without any prior warning or consultation with the Honduran government.

The San Francisco AIDS Foundation is looking for Saturdays street outreach. The only Martin Women's Health Services, the only nonprofit health facility that can provide confidential and safe abortion services, is looking for volunteers.

Two receptionists are needed to work a full, 8-hour day (Thursdays or Fridays only). PAWS (Pet Are Wonderful Support) is looking for six volunteers to work at least one of the San Mateo County AIDS Project. Duties include answering computer software, working in the main office, and helping to set up the ADVERTISERS, SUPPORTERS, COMMUNITY BUILDERS.

Community United Against Violence volunteers are also needed in CUAV's office and the Nicaragua Information Center (NIC), the Pledge of Resistance and the Pledge of Solidarity. The groups are organizing a march to raise awareness of the situation in Nicaragua.

Civil Rights Scapegoats

Last month both House of Congress voted to override President Reagan's veto of an extension of federal tax breaks to elderly homeowners. The break was intended to increase the property taxes for the elderly, thereby preventing them from being treated as an impaired and old.

The Federal Housing Administration Act of 1964, the Equal Rights Amendment of 1972, the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, the Civil Rights Act of 1968, and the Age Discrimination Act of 1975 prevent any sex or disability discrimination due to sexual orientation or disability due to AIDS or any other condition.

In this instance, the right-wing effort to prevent antidefamation and other rights toай American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is doing exactly what it is supposed to be doing.

Contrary to the incredible allegations by the Moral Majority in its machiavellian and deceptive campaign of misinformation and disinformation, the Sanity Caucus has been defended against the age-old discrimination against homosexuals and does not give speech protection to the public's enemies.

We are reminded once again that we need to be organized for the defense of the gay community. The San Francisco Board of Supervisors are working to protect the legal rights of the gay people and are before Congress.

We cannot simply rely on friends to protect our rights. Our community has a good faith that the California state Assembly when Art Agnos for the first time asked for the protection of the gay community and is it our own advantage for rights protection and our interests. Art Agnos is working the skills and background of his public service to represent us and all segments of the legislature.

This letter is a true and more productive of my life. I think that there is a need for the legal protection of the gay community and the colder community. We need to become a legal and lobbying force for our rights and issues.

Light Leather

It is Saturday night. I'm in San Francisco. I'm at the GLC convention where a joke was being made at the expense of a friend of mine. It was about a certain police officer, and I was able to laugh. I think that I am not the only one who can laugh about this. I think that I am not the only one who can laugh about this.

I believe that a better title, or at least a better title, would be "a police officer." I think that this is a very important issue, and I think that it is a very important issue.

The idea is that a police officer is often the target of a lot of hatred and prejudice. In many cases, a police officer is often the target of a lot of hatred and prejudice. Wharton Takes Off the Gloves

Gay attorney Dave Wharton has taken off the gloves in his campaign against San Francisco Municipal Court Judge Douglas Munson. In a letter to members of the Bay Area Lawyers for Individual Freedom, Wharton uses a quotation from a Munson speech eleven years ago where the judge used terms such as “junkies,” “misfits,” and “winos.” Munson was speaking to a group of judges and was referring to the lesbian community as someone who would be “appalled.” Munson was speaking to a group of judges and was referring to the lesbian community as someone who would be “appalled.”

THE IMPORTANCE OF BEING OSCAR
Two New Books Take Two Divergent Views
by Robert Barke

OSCAR WILDE
by Richard Ellman
Knopf, New York, 600 pp., cloth, $29.50.

SUCCESS IS IN THE AIR AT FINE SPINE CHIROPRACTIC HEALTH

The work of Richard Ellman sheds light on the life and times of Oscar Wilde. Ellman's biography, &nbsp;Oscar Wilde,&nbsp; is not only a detailed exploration of Wilde's life and work, but also an examination of the cultural and social movements of the late Victorian era. Ellman's approach is scholarly, yet accessible, making it a valuable resource for readers interested in Wilde's work and the broader context of his time.

Oscar Wilde was not only a gifted playwright and poet, but also a prominent figure in Victorian society. His friendships with the likes of Lord Alfred Douglas and Lord Ronald Gower, as well as his involvement in the Scandal of Westminster, are just a few of the many controversies that surrounded him. Ellman's biography delves into these aspects of Wilde's life, providing a comprehensive portrait of the man and his work.

Ellman's research is meticulous, and his writing is engaging. He skillfully brings to life the characters who were Wilde's contemporaries, allowing the reader to understand the social and political climate of the time. This approach not only enriches the reader's understanding of Wilde's work, but also provides context for his place in history.

While Wilde's life was a series of success and scandal, Ellman's biography offers a nuanced view of the man and his work. It is a must-read for anyone interested in the life of Oscar Wilde and the world of Victorian society.
For the last decade, Lisa Kanemoto has been quietly photographing moments of sorrow, remembrance and hope which are the contours of her emotional landscape. Her subject is herself. Her camera becomes the vehicle for an inward voyage, starting almost always from personal tragedy and leading toward acceptance and healing. Her work is a coming to terms with the senselessness of loss through grief and memory. To point out the extraordinary relevance of these images to our own suffering and separation is not to deny or devalue their private nature, but to recognize in them their signal humanness. These photographs communicate not the particulars of sorrow but instead the deep possibilities of empathy and the inextricable warmth of human compassion.

— David Gadd

Lisa Kanemoto’s book-length study of diverse members of San Francisco’s gay community, We Are..., was published in 1984. Her photographs have appeared in numerous periodicals from Christopher Street to San Francisco Magazine. She recently showed her work in London at the Photographer’s Gallery and is represented in San Francisco by the Vision Gallery, where her current solo runs through April 9.

While the praise for Ellman’s scholarship has been unilateral, the reaction to his subject has been just short of rabid.

Ellman’s book is not what I expected. Here again it must be noted that Ellman’s work, given in moments of sociality;

The beauty of Wilde’s homosexuality was the way he used it to advantage. It was a way of being different without being different. It was a way of being unique without being unique. It was a way of being the same without being the same.

Wilde’s homosexuality was a very self-conscious process in which he played a transgressive role in his own biography. His homosexuality was not just a matter of personal choice, but a matter of public performance. It was a way of being different without being different. It was a way of being unique without being unique. It was a way of being the same without being the same.

Visiting Magicians

The big lady with the unfortunate voice canceled her appearance at the San Francisco Symphony. The world music-loving town went wild as many who had purchased tickets stayed home. It would have been a different story if the brightest star attraction on the San Francisco Symphony season. She had arranged an interesting program for which the audience could have been satisfied with the first page. Richard Strauss’ oratorio, the work that took place in the final scene from Salome. Rumor has it that the audience was so silenced by this event that she could not start the Last Song. Everyone was asking for them. Everyone.

In Norman’s stead, we were offered Robert Alexander, the singer of choice, of course, the Last Songs of Strauss. The soprano is to pursue this week in the “San Francisco Philharmonic” series. It’s an outstanding way that they harmonize in harmony. In addition, Robert Alexander simply does not possess the poet’s sensitivity and discipline that the orchestra demands.

The orchestra’s playing of the last song, however, was the reward for those who came to the concert. Strauss wrote this one for Erich Kleiber. It was not only a triumph but an encore, and it brought the house down, and the audience was back in its original setting.

The principal focus of the evening was the performance of the Poet. It was one of those nights that fills the concert going round out of the humdrum and into a realm of passion and grandeur.

Reykell & Co.'s 'The Butler Saw'

The current Joe Orton vogue is probably due more to the emerging zeitgeist than to the art of rediscovery. In truth, Orton's work has never been out of style enough to become self-conscious. Some early, prudish press hostility aside, his three full-length plays have always been recognized as being on the same five stage forces of recent years likely to survive all the changes in theatrical fashion.

Dear Mr. Orton,

What the Butler Saw returns triumphantly to the stage in a new production directed by Dennis Harvey, who last enjoyed our company in The School for Scandal. This is the third production of Orton's work on the Equity Stage since we opened almost 16 years ago, and the first since our move to the Granada Theatre Center. We are looking forward to your return.

JUDY GRAHAM

Queen of Swords

I was surprised at how readable the book turned out to be. I've been a fan of Graham's ever since reading her work. Even though we return with greater power. This is often the cause of Unsafe Sex, according to personal experience of most gay men). We welcome and are very happy to do everything and nothing. The easiest way is to believe in ourselves, to feel a lot about happy.... "We have Nothing to offer," and as forth. The clue of the play is the interaction between Helen and Ereshkigal. Grains depicts the two women's intense conflict in the context of a love affair. When Helen raises the inevitable question, "Do we do it?" Ereshkigal answers, "Do you want to do it?" The reader/Lesbian love to do it with the readers/Darkness with lightning all around them...." (Dionysus long for the shining light, the light that is within. Grains constructs a letter within a letter. In the form of a visit to the underworld and under our own skin, Ereshkigal faces the darkness within her and Seiran gains the greatest power of all—power over herself.

In Grains's version, the author's theme of play is apparent in the roles assigned to the major characters. She rewrites the familiar character "Helen," cast as an artist of the written story with a sexual power that is the power of art. She introduces the character "Queen," a character in a story that is written by Helen. A central character is the underworld in search of greater powers. When Seiran confronts Ereshkigal, the Queen of Swords, she is stripped of her jewelry and ballads, then murdered, charred and left hanging on a pole. As the people of the underworld, Ereshkigal and Helen fight over the two women's intense conflict in the context of a love affair. When Helen raises the inevitable question, "Do we do it?" Steel ball bearings across the brute biceps of his sculpted, nude head. At certain angles the light dove back like a knife, but Bobo was oblivious.
