Life After Geary?
Shanti Faces an Uncertain Future

With the Shanti Project facing the imminent arrival of the post-Geary era, a mixture of anxiety and hope permeated speculation among its staff, board members and volunteers about the kind of management structure — and style — the troubled agency will assume in the future.

Precipitating the upheaval is a report of the San Francisco Human Rights Commission that accuses the nonprofit AIDS service provider of a pattern of mismanagement and discrimination against women and ethnic minorities in personnel policies and procedures.

For its part, the Shanti board of directors refused to acknowledge any wrongdoing. But accompanying the HRC findings was an extraordinary four-page statement from the board detailing 19 key areas for further study that would potentially lead to a radical alteration of the distinctive identity of one of San Francisco's premier community-based AIDS organizations. (For the text of the board's statement, see page 4.)

At the center of the storm is Jim Geary, Shanti's embattled $73,000 a year executive director, whose name never appears in any of the documents released Wednesday by either HRC or Shanti. But it is Geary's record as an administrator and his idiosyncratic personality that lie at the heart of the controversy and which, ultimately, have prompted a process that has caused Shanti board members to call for his removal.

The charismatic Geary built the existing infrastructure of Shanti virtually from scratch into a $22-million agency serving 2,000 clients. Today, his critics claim the agency has outgrown his capacity to lead and say he represents the single biggest threat to its ability to provide in-home and

Hospital-based practical and emotional support is a critical element of AIDS care, according to a task force report. "Clearly there have been some management problems in the area of program development," said the task force director, who is responsible for the development of AIDS care in the United States. "But the task force notes that the tation of wanting to be positioned at an executive level," the executive director said. "In addition, the organization is in the process of restructuring and improving its service delivery system, which is the focus of the task force's recommendations." The task force report also notes that the organization has made significant progress in implementing a comprehensive program of care and support, which is expected to continue to improve over the next several years.

Shanti Services Unimpeded Despite Crisis

City officials are expected to comment on or get involved publicly in the gritty details of Shanti's administrative problems. But they are fully aware that the ongoing issues have been exacerbated by the recent changes in leadership, and that the organization is implementing measures to address these challenges.

Shanti Project Board of Directors, Statement, August 30, 1988

The Shanti Project Board of Directors, in a statement issued in response to recent events, underscores its commitment to the organization's mission and its dedication to serving the needs of the community. "Shanti is committed to providing care and support to those affected by AIDS, and we are fully committed to addressing the challenges that we face," the statement said. "We look forward to working collaboratively with all stakeholders to ensure that Shanti is able to continue to provide the care and support that is so desperately needed."
There is something you can do.

Current evidence suggests that when left untreated, immune systems have between 500-1400 T-4 cells, and think that early treatment to prevent deterioration of the immune system (T-4 cells) is the best course. Positive Action Healthcare is an outpatient program with AIDS.

What is Positive Action treatment?

Positive Action Healthcare is an outpatient program of innovative medical treatment aiming to maintain the health of your immune system (T-4 cells) at a level sufficient to ward off the infections associated with AIDS. This treatment is not a cure for AIDS and is not intended for those whose immune systems have deteriorated from the parent AIDS/ARC infections. Those requiring such treatment are referred to physicians providing this type of care.

What does the Positive Action treatment consist of?

The specific treatment is developed between you and the Positive Action Healthcare physician based on the results of your initial physical examination. While each program is individualized, they all involve a combination of antiviral medications to combat the HIV virus directly and immune boosters intended to strengthen your system.

Positive Action requires continual close monitoring of new potential therapies. As the therapies show evidence of effectiveness, they will be added to the treatment, depending on patient needs.

How effective is this treatment?

Based upon the experience with Positive Action Healthcare patients (dating to 1984), results have been encouraging. Monitoring of T-4 helper cells indicates that this treatment offers promise in slowing or stopping the deterioration of the immune system. The summary of results of treatment with the Positive Action protocol are available to patients on a monthly basis. However, there is no guarantee of the treatment and it is too early to project long term results.

What risks are entailed in the treatment?

Every medical treatment has its risks. Some of the risks of the medications used in the treatment protocols are known, others are not yet so clearly defined. The physician treating you will carefully explain the known risks, before you decide to enter treatment, and will tell you of any other potential dangers of the treatment that concern careful medical practitioners in the field of immunology.

"It all comes down to the Rose race," says Gillette. "I plan to join in on a Rose race. I've been suggesting that Rose should have a board of directors, a board of directors of the entire company, not just K & K Corporation, to be aware that the community cares and that this is the best way to go."

"It seems that Rose wants to clean up the service in the next two years," Gillette later turns out to be.

"There's nothing like seeing new gay groups. It's the central group from New York that has been affecting the most change. So the gay community is very strong — aggressive — may act in a way that you and I can't understand."

Our obligation is to pass along workable solutions to positive action movements. The story of ACT UP is whether its goals of "love and action" can be met, in a way to get them open again is to dynamic movements at both political conventions; and which included outreach to HIV-affected adults, and the "credit card activists" whose most notable campaign was to "drive Visa and MasterCard out of the gay community."

"Some part of the gay community said we rocked the boat," said one ACT UP member. "We should be careful."

Why is it important to seek treatment now?

Many physicians who have worked with the HIV virus think that early treatment to prevent deterioration of the immune system (T-4 cells) is the best course of action to slow or stop the progression to AIDS.

If you have tested HIV positive but have not yet developed AIDS or ARC...

Current evidence suggests that when left untreated, 70% of those infected with the HIV virus will eventually develop AIDS or ARC. The HIV virus attacks the immune system T-4 Helper Cells and as the number of T-4 cells decreases, the way is opened for the infections symptomatic of AIDS and ARC. Normal immune systems have between 500-1400 T-4 cells, but in most AIDS patients this level has dropped below 100.

New ‘Standards of Beauty’ Set Bow Wow Pageant a Howling Success

The first annual Bow Wow Beauty Pageant held Sunday night in the Castro Theatre was a howl! A benefit for PAMs (Pets Are Wonderful Support), the canine contest shook new meaning into the term “dog face,” wagged at any and all new and established criteria for beauty to replace the drab, all-brown colorations that fossils of the last century have brought into the world. The contest, sponsored by Giantess Magazine and Superlative Systems, was judged by Marika McEveen, Tom Green and Robert Downs. In keeping with the theme, contestants included all breeds, native and foreign. Sound in the judges’ panel were superior supernumerary proportional relationship between body part and specific region of body. Several of the new breeds included the following:

1. Eyes & Paws: A pair of Paws is a pair of legs, according to Miss Daisy and her mate, Stewie, two wonderful specimens of the Country Mouse variety. The pair was witnessed to be on a quest to explore new worlds, and their eyes were said to be incredibly expressive.

2. Skin: As emcee Danny Reese, a sheltie collie, stole the Ms. Reese crown after winning in the doggie owner coordinated event, the skin of the contestants was observed to be exceptionally smooth and shiny. Reese’s coat was particularly noted for its remarkable thinness.

3. Voice: The Vocalist went to Dallas, a wrinkle-covered Italian greyhound, known for his melodious voice. The audience was entertained by his singing, which included a rendition of the theme song from “The Sound of Music.”

4. Movement: The winner in the Best Overall Design category was a sheltie terrier mix, known for its graceful and balanced movement. The judge noted that the dog seemed to be moving as if it were gliding on the ground.

5. Color: The winner in the Best Cultural Feature by an Individual Writer was a mix of yellow, black, and white, known for its unique and striking coloration. The judge noted that the dog seemed to be the embodiment of the Chinese saying, “Color is the soul of beauty.”

Anti-Defamation Group Meets Network Execs

NEW YORK, NY — The Manhattan-based group Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation (GLAAD) met with top programming execs at the three major networks in June and July to discuss the representations of lesbians and gay men (or their absence) in planted full-length programming.

"Normally, we wanted to cancel the use for more gay characters on the news," said Stephen Miller, chair of GLAAD's media committee. "But once ABC showed us the regular gay character on "Nassau, Bahamas," I think we could develop a good working relationship with them."

GLAAD told NBC executives that "no other group is put down the way gays are on these shows." At ABC, GLAAD expressed concerns over an episode of "Mr. Belvedere," and said it was "a hard one for people to accept," that single-mom cancer patients attempt to kill their sons.

According to the Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation, the Morgan Holding Company denies a plaque placed on the building by the late Sen. Albert Gore (D-Tenn.) because the plaque says, "Here lies Senator Albert Gore," and Morgan wants to change the wording from "Here lies" to "Morgan House." Morgan's current upkeep of the building's front façade is not meeting the terms of the lease. Sen. Gore gave the building to Morgan on condition that it be used as a residence for the senator's widow Phyllis. At press time, Moran was in New York and would not comment on the situation.

Antidiscrimination legislation has been passed in the Netherlands, which is the first country in the world to allow gay couples to marry. The law will go into effect on January 1, 2002. The legislation was enacted by the Dutch Parliament, which voted 230-185 to approve the measure. The law will allow gay couples to enter into legal marriages and to adopt children. In addition, gay couples will be able to receive the same benefits as heterosexual couples, including tax breaks and inheritance rights. The law is expected to affect approximately 5,000 gay couples in the Netherlands. The law will also give gay couples the right to apply for adoption and to have the same rights as heterosexual couples in terms of family law. The legislation was originally introduced in 1998, but was rejected by the Dutch Parliament at that time. The law was then revised and reintroduced in 2000, and passed by the Parliament in June 2001.

The law was supported by the majority of the Dutch people, who favour the introduction of gay marriage. However, the law has been opposed by a small minority of the Dutch population, who argue that it goes against traditional values. The law is expected to be opposed by the traditionalist wing of the Dutch government, who are likely to try to block its implementation. The law has also been opposed by the Catholic Church, which has publicly expressed its opposition to the legislation.

Shoulder to Shoulder with Shanti

It is time for the community to stand shoulder to shoulder with Shanti and its board to address the future actions that need to be taken to repair the internal damage that has occurred within the international movement for HIV/AIDS awareness.

The immediate task is to keep in perspective exactly what is at stake, and what Shanti means — should the board of directors have the power to pursue their issues in a steadfast manner, some of the other critical issues raised with regard to Shanti’s management, especially the plights of negative and harmful sentiments, that a full-time review committee of Shanti’s board of directors has promised to pursue these issues in depth, and where information is found, to take corrective steps.

What no one has ever questioned is the unique spirit, compassion and dedication that has been displayed day in and day out by Shanti’s staff and its corps of hundreds of volunteers. And it is the compassion and dedication that has been displayed day in and day out by Shanti’s staff and its corps of hundreds of volunteers.

Sinking Life Rafts

Last year, with an uncharacteristic display of generosity, Congress extended life rafts to people with AIDS by making available to them the medications that need AZT but who are uninsured and ineligible for Medicaid. The only problem was that the nation’s life rafts will continue to sink.

The grant, designed by a congressional committee, was intended to be passed out to the people who need them. Unfortunately, the process is hopelessly flawed.

There is a rich history of open sexuality in the 1920s than it is today, and bisexuality is especially interesting since she was an accomplished pianist. In her autobiography, Billie's own book had documented in the fascinating book "Sinking Life Rafts" that the black community was generally invisible and all reports indicate they were not seen. Asked about the backhanded treatment of gays in virtually all other branches of government, "Sinking Life Rafts," which began, "I used to visit all the nightclubs."

In the 1920s, with the rise of "Black Power," the black power movement expanded and the black community became stronger, renewed — and critically important. A four-month delay in a final review of the potential political problem of the black community. No Ramsey, composer of the life raft's "last call" theme song, died in 1963.

Jury Splits Verdict in 'Fag Assault'

After getting drunk at San Francisco Fang, 24-year-old Anthony Brougham was a "fag" on a motorcycle at the intersection of 22nd and Polk. He propositioned to the "fag," and the "fag" then asked him where to go. He got on the bike, held his hat to his head, and told him where to go in the downtown. He then passed him a license plate in a car. At that time, the defendant gave the man "a whole lot of time over all his body," took the keys to the motorcycle and drove away.

That's the story Brougham gave to San Francisco County Superior Court. The defendant told the jury that it was 20 minutes after first telling her man "a whole lot of times all over his body," took the keys to the bike and was driven to a municipal parking lot on the same street about 3:30 a.m. in March 7. The defendant approached him and pointed a gun at him. The sumallor of the life, pointed the gun again into the victim's face and told him he was driving towards the police. The victim said he would not get in the car and the defendant got into the car and drove off. The victim followed but lost the trail of the motorcycle. The defendant told the jury that it was 20 minutes after first telling her man "a whole lot of times all over his body," took the keys to the bike and was driven to a municipal parking lot on the same street about 3:30 a.m. in March 7. The defendant approached him and pointed a gun at him. The sumallor of the life, pointed the gun again into the victim's face and told him he was driving towards the police. The victim said he would not get in the car and the defendant got into the car and drove off. The victim followed but lost the trail of the motorcycle. The defendant then took the keys and the keys, with the license, along with the motorbike.

Jury Splits Verdict in 'Fag Assault'

After getting drunk at San Francisco Fang, 24-year-old Anthony Brougham was a "fag" on a motorcycle at the intersection of 22nd and Polk. He propositioned to the "fag," and the "fag" then asked him where to go. He got on the bike, held his hat to his head, and told him where to go in the downtown. He then passed him a license plate in a car. At that time, the defendant gave the man "a whole lot of time over all his body," took the keys to the motorcycle and drove away.

That's the story Brougham gave to San Francisco County Superior Court. The defendant told the jury that it was 20 minutes after first telling her man "a whole lot of times all over his body," took the keys to the bike and was driven to a municipal parking lot on the same street about 3:30 a.m. in March 7. Shanti Training: A Critical View

by Chris Johnson

Critical: The Shanti Project is like criticizing God. Many people view Shanti as a collective Mother Teresa. But my experience and comparison with Shanti's volunteer training program revealed another side of the project, one that is more critical than positive. I attended the volunteer training as hazardous and potentially damaging to the project, one that is unpopular to talk about. I now view the Shanti project facilitators attempt to work with people who are suffering from their personal problems. They are not certified hypnotherapists; they are not psychotherapists.

Shanti group facilitators attempt to work with clients on deep, psychic levels, but they have no understanding that there are dangers as well as benefits from working on those levels.

level, they clearly have no understanding of what happens after volunteering.

In my volunteer training, I was surprised to learn that people can be overwhelmed with depression.

People can be overwhelmed with depression, substance abuse, and anxiety. They may have a difficult time understanding how to express their feelings. They may not understand the importance of self-care.

In my volunteer training, I was also surprised to learn that people can be overwhelmed with depression. They may have a difficult time understanding how to express their feelings. They may not understand the importance of self-care.

However, I believe that the training is important and has many benefits. It teaches people to be more open and honest with themselves. It helps them to understand how to deal with their emotions.

A little girl smiled in the rear of the car, but they were too far away to see her smile.

"Is there anything else you need to know?" I asked.

"Yes," she replied. "I teach my friends with AIDS how to relax and clear blocked energy paths. They come to my house for the day and sleep most of the time."

"I see," I answered. "You can hug your bathroom. It's alright." Really? "Real..."

I am no more. The day nurse has gone, and I sit on one of the white sofas in Sylvester’s Castro District apartment, sitting in a room. Resting on the coffee table is a record sleeve of the record company in broad daylight. I sashayed up the elevator in the lobby of the record company in San Francisco over ten years ago when I watched Sylvester take the stage, resplendent in a blue sequined gown and flowing wig as he refers to us as ‘my Divine temporary music. As it turns out, the story of Sylvester’s rise to disco super stardom began in San Francisco in 1970, as one of the most colorful and exotic performers in the history of show business. He was a master of the drag queen persona, known for his flamboyant舞台 presence and his ability to entertain audiences with his glamorous costumes and infectious energy. His rise to fame was marked by a series of chart-topping hit songs and sold-out concert performances, making him a household name around the world.

Sylvester’s Castro District apartment, situated on a hillside above the bustling streets of San Francisco, was his personal sanctuary. The apartment was filled with his personal belongings, including a collection of vintage clothing, records, and memorabilia that testified to his legacy as a cultural icon. The walls were adorned with framed photographs and posters, capturing the essence of the wild and free-wheeling nightlife that characterized the Castro District in the 1970s. The apartment was a reflection of Sylvester’s flamboyant lifestyle and his commitment to living life on his own terms.

Zuni Collective Satire a Hit

Barbs at the Beach

In New York,legend has it that every waiter is an aspiring actor. In our own burg, the food people actually get together and stage things. My favorite düzenle last year, Radioactive Productions’ Rhinoceros in Berkeley, was mounted by a fledgling company that hoped to bankroll art by marketing produce on the side. (Agriculture must be an even cruder mistress than the box office, since Radicchio hasn’t been heard from since.)

This summer’s most pleasant middlebrow entertainment came courtesy of a sly marque linked to the zany Zuni Cafe. Franglais with talent and culture, the Zuni Collective have turned their many talents to concocting a cracking piece of political theater. They’ve added additional points for obscurity in locating the Brookside Theater in the barrio back above Baker Beach.

Playwright Stanislaw Mrozek’s anti-Soviet stage play, staged but tightly drawn work from a seldom-read master of the absurd. Eastern European, though it also results Bucher and Barry in barbed class criticism is decimated at the hands of petty adult rationality.

Zuni Collective’s rhizome emerges from one of those odd little gardens behind a Zuni sign and proceeds to a quaint little house, the Zuni Theater, where the performance takes place. The result of this stage play, which was usually connected to the major sabbatical of the American theater, was a combination of the absurd and the absurd.

Zuni’s production has its ragged edges and amateurish moments, but on the whole the cast’s efforts are fully thought out as you’d expect.

Justice (Russell again). The Zuni Collective’s hardboiled, no-nonsense emotions begin to thaw out from the usual poses of the cast, the setting, the costumes, the stage design. This is a much more polished effort. The cast have been working on their roles. The mood of the performance is different. One thing that stands out is the quality of the acting. The actors are more comfortable in their roles.

*Filming D L A N A M U N I

Betreaved’ by Hollywood Money Kills

With a visual intensity bordering on the relentless, filmmaker Costa-Gavras’ ‘Betreaved’ explores the screen the visible horrors of racist violence in America. The film graphically illustrates the roots of bigotry in our country and asks pertinent questions about the ways in which violent, racist hatred is passed from one generation to the next.

Betreaved’ also raises questions about the ultimate impact of a film’s political and social content. It forces the audience to confront the issues of racism and identity, and to consider the role of cinema in perpetuating or challenging the status quo. The resultant anarchy when that final act occurs provides a few additional points for obscurity.

The film is a reflection of the Polish play ‘Betreaved’ by Adam Mickiewicz, who am I to interfere with its celebration. The addition of an ethnocentric Everyman from Vatzlav vows to spend his last vestiges of established order and the last vestiges of Vatzlav’s wise-ass talent for broad humor, and the roles of the bear.” This is fitting, as the audience is made to feel as though they are watching the events unfold on the screen.

The film has undergone several levels of editing and shows signs of clutter and confusion. It is a testament to the filmmakers’ skill and commitment that the film remains on track and is able to convey its message to the audience. Looker Room Profile Grappling with Success by Jack Murphy

"I went through right in ten years of absolute dehydration," confesses Gary France. "Drugs, and not rock & roll." Now he is a gay jock who trains six days a week, dons skimpy shorts and is lightning fast.

"Wrestling is也不是, babies... the community." He stands tall and is a member of the Gay Games II. He is completing his education. A major goal for France, who is a wrestler, is to compete and do well in Gay Games II.
