Campaign on AIDS Initiative Underfunded

Prop. 96 Struggles for Attention

by Tim Taylor

Of two mandatory AIDS reporting and testing initiatives on the November ballot, Prop. 96 is the poor relation that even most AIDS activists and gay leaders wish they could walk away from or ignore.

With an edge of guilt or reluctance in their voices, these leaders perceive Prop. 96 to be a sure crowd-pleaser among California voters. After all, it singles out for mandatory testing unpopular constituencies like prostitutes, sex offenders and other alleged criminals.

And there is a strong layer of law-and-order appeal that Prop. 96 supporters are hiding behind. The measure is Drastic service reductions are slated for Health Center 1 (HCl), one of five city-run centers and the health department's frontline community AIDS clinic, which after October will eliminate all drop-in hours and close the door to new HIV-positive clients. Positioned at the crossroads of chronic nursing and clerical staff shortages and cramped quarters, official at the Castro-based facility claim they can no longer accommodate new adult clients except as patient slots open up.

"The staff is already overwhelmed, we're short a few clerical workers... and we don't have enough room," said Dr. Fred Strauss, a staff physician at HCl. Strauss added that money budgeted by the city for the last few years to build new examination rooms and create "a more visibly gay "image" has yet to materialize.

"For September 1st, Dr. Ken Dunnigan, medical director of HCl, told his administrative staff of the impending policy changes. Four week's drop-in clinics was converted to appointment clinic so that staff could screen out new patients and, in Dunnigan's words, "short them down... eventually to Ward 86 at San Francisco General."

But with a nursing shortage "accompanied" the reported AIDS sero­conversion rate in San Francisco General, Ward 86 "looks like a drowning number of new patients," according to Dr. Donald Meier, associate director of the hospital's AIDS Antiviral Office. Meanwhile, requests come in to the city for alternativeambulatory and intensive AIDS health services are rare. "In the past, people who have agreed to get treated have never been more demanding than now, said Strauss, director of AIDS Health Services.

But health department officials, volumes to call Health Center I's plug "a fact of life," according to Dunnigan. "We get nods from the health department that we're doing a good job, but they want us to do more.

In many respects, the current patient demand is a result of the new money of the San Francisco AIDS Foundation and community support. Dunnigan said that in the past several years, number of P PAs will raise for beyond the city's current capacity to provide medical care. Accordingly, said health department director Dick Wiesinger, a spokesman for the Castro community.

"We are short a number of people to treat them when they're not a current early rather than later and on demand access to it, said Dick Wiesinger, co-director of Project Inform, a group which advocates early HIV testing and treatment. "Urgent care facilities and drop-in clinics have never been more demands than now, people coming to the HCl, Health Department is committed to maintaining by health depart­mental officials."

The health department officials, volumes to call Health Center I's plug "a fact of life," according to Dunnigan. "We get nods from the health department that we're doing a good job, but they want us to do more.

To Dr. Ken Dunnigan one obvious solution is to continue to make HCl a "success in attracting the attention or in­tervention urges by Gall Kronenberg, co-director of Project Inform, a group which advocates early HIV testing and treatment. "We simply don't have the resources, said Dunnigan. "We want Dr. Dunnigan to continue. It seems like we have to plead and beg for a few new resources, our response is that we can't enable up with the demands.

Stoned said the report to see a "gap," which the city as not to make the proper investment in. "We have a groundswell of national support. Endorse Citizens 'Progress' Chicago Gay Rights Ordinance Defeated
by Brian Kelly

After nearly three hours of debate marked by boos, cheers and citations of the Constitution, the State Senate passed on September 18 narrowly defeated a gay rights ordinance, 26-24.

The ordinance, sponsored by State Senator Adolfo A. Carson of Chicago, would have allowed members of the gay community to be protected from discrimination in housing, employment and public accommodations.

The defeat of the ordinance came as a shock to many supporters of gay rights, who had hoped that the legalization of same-sex marriage would lead to further gains for the gay community.

The ordinance, which was brought to the Senate by State Senator Adolfo A. Carson of Chicago, was opposed by many conservative lawmakers who argued that the measure would undermine traditional family values.

The defeat of the ordinance marks a setback for the gay rights movement in Illinois, where the issue has been a contentious one for years.

 volte, the newly formed San Francisco Dance Troupe and five of the Bay Area's hottest dance troupes presented "Sundown," a program espoused a philosophy of taking responsibility for one's life, and the desire to be responsible, to the point that you can change your lifestyle. Whether you get involved in "alternative therapy" — as the AIDs Health Project has been described — or you want to stay within the system, as Positives Being Positive has been doing, the one thing you can do is help yourself.

Some of the groups which currently operate under the AIDs Health Project umbrella, Therapeutic Education, Positive Living Resources, and the newly formed San Francisco Women's AIDs Action Group, are doing just that. Others, such as the AIDS Health Project, are working to educate the public about the disease and its effects.

The AIDS Health Project is a private, nonprofit organization that provides services to people with HIV infection or AIDs. The project offers a variety of programs and services, including counseling, support groups, and education.

The project also provides information and resources to the public, including publications, brochures, and a lending library. The project also offers a "hotline," which people can call to speak with a trained volunteer.

The AIDS Health Project is supported by grants from a variety of sources, including the United States Department of Health and Human Services, the City of San Francisco, and private foundations.

The project is based in San Francisco, California, and is available to people in the United States.

Philadelphia Jails Begin Distributing Condoms

PHILADELPHIA, PA — Condom distribution in Philadelphia’s jails has begun, as part of an overall AIDS education plan for prisoners to be implemented in stages between 1988 and 1990. The program was specifically designed to include AIDS prevention education for prisoners who are low-income, young, and racially or ethnically isolated. The distribution of condoms will begin in the trial phase in one major city in the Philadelphia area, with plans to expand to other cities.

Prisoners are expected to receive the condoms at the time of their arrival at the jail, and prisoners in the system have not been convicted of any crime. They’re expected to be implemented in stages between 1988 and 1990. The program was specifically designed to include AIDS prevention education for prisoners who are low-income, young, and racially or ethnically isolated.

The goal of the distribution is to help prisoners learns about AIDS and how to prevent its spread. The program will also provide educational materials and counseling for prisoners on AIDS prevention.

The program is part of a larger effort by the city to combat the spread of AIDS in the Philadelphia area. The city has already implemented similar programs in other areas, and is hoping to expand the program to other locations in the future.

The program is expected to be well-received by prisoners and the community alike. The city is hopeful that it will help to reduce the spread of AIDS and improve the health of the population.
City Health Department Crucely Shortchanges Services for HIV

It is common health care practice today to urge people with HIV infection to seek treatment as early as possible after detection. People who have heeded that advice are living longer, healthier lives. People who ignore the early warning of a positive HIV test often find themselves signing a death warrant, allowing themselves to slip into an inevitable progression to ARC or full-blown AIDS.

Why was it necessary for the medical community to experience a shocking inadequacy in San Francisco's responses to the AIDS epidemic while health care workers in other intradepartmental funding?

Informals to the Health Center's new policies, Florence Strong, the health department's deputy director for community health services, noted that the Center was symptomatic of a chronic shortage in services and saw little new energy from the city in making services available.

The medical director of Health Center 1, Dr. Ken Dunigan, says his antiquated facility and overworked staff can no longer keep up with the demand for services.

We can sympathize with his problem, even as we deplore how those turned down for new records, in-antibody status.

It is not just about George Bush and Michael Dukakis, it is about the antigay policies that both of them hold power in their state. Ruling on Restroom Arrests Case

Is there something about being elevated to the California Supreme Court that causes a person's thinking to change? It must be so, because Justice Anita C.araman moved from the California Court of Appeal, Second District, to the California Supreme Court, and her decision in a recent case represents a shift in the way the law is applied.

In the case of People v. Nahmod, a group of men challenged the California Penal Code Section 647(d), which makes it illegal to 'provoke another person to engage in sexual conduct in a public place with the intent to rob it, the lawyer representing the group claimed that the statute was unconstitutional because it was too vague and gave the police too much discretion in deciding whether an arrest should be made.

The California Supreme Court agreed. The justices ruled that the statute was too vague and gave the police too much discretion in deciding whether an arrest should be made.

Possible Model for Community Trials
Herb Study Shows Promise

Keith Barton, MD, a Berkeley physician who is also a certified acupuncture practitioner in Chinese herbal medicine, has prepared a combination of traditional Chinese herbs, which have shown anti-HIV activity in laboratory tests. The only other patient so far to see the combination was P-24 antigen positive for three weeks. The patient was using no other treatment during this time.

Herb 1, prepared by Barton, is a compound of several traditional Chinese herbs. Other combinations include an acupuncturist trained in Chinese herbal medicine, who has prepared a combination of the herbs. That patient's count did not change for two weeks after the treatment began. Barton suggests that these findings have good laboratory results as well as experience with the components of the herb, and he feels the treatment could be further studied and applied, and that further testing would be on won, and studies.

Series of studies, a too-major New York hospital found that 50 percent of the patients who died of AIDS had cytomegalovirus (CMV) infections not detected while they were alive. Several other opportunistic conditions were also undiagnosed. Three-quarters of the patients who were found to have latent AIDS-related conditions had CMV.

This study, published July 9, is now being reviewed at the University of California, San Francisco General Hospital and New York City Department of Public Health and New York Hospital and Cornell Medical Center, can help doctors by letting them know which conditions are not as often diagnosed, so they can check carefully for these, especially in patients with undiagnosed CMV.

Of all AIDS death reports between May 1 and May 27, 1985, nine large teaching hospitals, one public and one private, and all patients had CMV and all AIDS-related conditions were present.

One problem was that in 90 percent of the patients, some 40 percent of the patients did not have CMV.

FASHION TRENDS FOR MEN

Shirts: Wide, often padded, with sleeves poised to the body of garments in non-traditional ways.

Colars and Lapels: Anything and everything from narrow lapels and double-breasted to wide collar and lapel designs. The most conservative collection comes from Nino Cerruti who seems to be aiming for the Brooks Brothers look with multi-breasted suits and jackets in classic fabrics. And the most daringly ridiculous collection comes from Raoul Geni who shows pants in yarns inside with rubber jackets. It's a look best sported on skateboarders.

Marvel and Francis Giradou, whose work has recently been eclipsed more progressive French designers - seems to be seeking out in new directions, recapitulating some of the appeal of their original creations from five or six years ago. Their jacket-on-jacket approach is a perfect example of this. All the jackets are taken apart and reassembled in different configurations. The difference is primarily reflected in the way sleeves and lapels are designed and assembled. The traditional shape of natural shoulder vs. raglan sleeves has been ousted aside. More often than not, shirts, sweaters and jackets are constructed from the neckline, often supported and given shape by underlying padding.

The wide variety of styles presented in "The French Idea" seems to reflect a commercial interest understanding that many men fashion alternatives but have no intention of totally abandoning tradition (much less an excessive wadrobe accumulated over several years) in favor of tendon, sectional whites. The designers are all presenting styles that are home-fitting and relatively versatile, and any savvy shopper will leave the more eclectic offerings for those who can pull them off (i.e., the vest is back). Unfortunately, you have to live in Minnesota to make the investment worthwhile.

The French, however, do not do every- thing successfully, and Guy Azoulay's designs for Christiano's hit the mark. The look is based on the 50's, and the style is decidedly American Army surplus. Brother Juniper's Bread Box

Soul Food Place

A old Burmese proverb says a full gut supports a moral person. Or perhaps it supports os­micity. Either way, turn from Brother Juniper's and Box over onion soup with your gut full of some of the best muffins and coffee cake baked in the city, and no­ver Porto Street does seem somewhat, fal­en.

"I don't rush over that, " he said, giggling. "But some of the things we do are so­menous.

After the first day, five and a half score­dinner and appetizer at the satiable "Special'' ($3.75) gives you one of those bread and potatoes (the fear yel­low, plaid too blue, blue and green platelets and a pimple of dirty maple sugar)

Bodily进食: The breakfasts at Brother Juniper's are hearty, astounding and sometimes seem as if they are a part of your daily routine. The "Special" ($3.75) consists of a choice of bread and potatoes, and as you can see from the picture, it is quite substantial. The potatoes are light and fluffy, with a hint of sweetness that adds to their overall flavor. The bread is a light brown color and has a soft, spongy texture. The entire meal is topped off with a small pitcher of maple syrup, which complements the flavors of the potatoes and bread perfectly.

After a long morning at work, the idea of a well-prepared meal becomes even more appealing. Brother Juniper's provides just that. The staff is friendly and attentive, making sure that every customer is satisfied with their meal. The menu is extensive and offers a variety of options to choose from, so there is something for everyone. The prices are also reasonable, making it an affordable option for those on a budget.

The atmosphere is cozy and inviting, with soft lighting and comfortable seating. The restaurant has a warm and welcoming feel, and the music playing in the background adds to the overall ambiance. It's a great place to grab a meal with friends or family and enjoy a leisurely conversation.

Overall, Brother Juniper's Bread Box is a great choice for anyone looking for a hearty and delicious breakfast. The quality of the food is high, and the service is top-notch. It's a great option for locals and visitors alike, and I highly recommend giving it a try.
Men Eight Out

In 1919 the Chicago White Sox agreed to fix the World Series in return for $500,000. Chicagoans named the players the Black Sox. Eight members of the Sox, including their headliner, Shoeless Joe Jackson, were banned from baseball for life. The Black Sox scandal made the century lose its innocence. Most of the players were young, naive men who were caught off guard. The public was outraged. The scandal seemed to have little connection to the complexities of the 20th-century loss of innocence. It is in this context that the film Eight Men Out was made. Directed by David M. Evans, the film stars Tom Berenger, Kevin Costner, and Billy Crystal, and it is a parody of America’s 20th-century loss of innocence.

The Thin Blue Line

Emanual Irving Morris was convicted for the murder of a 14-year-old named James Byrd Jr. Morris was a Black man, and the victim was a White man. The film The Thin Blue Line was made as a result of this conviction. The film tells the story of how Morris was convicted of the murder, and how he was later released after a re-examination of the evidence. The film is a powerful example of the power of film to tell a story and to change public opinion.

Amori Assocks

Sextile was sublime. The sound of Pacific breezes in the middle of the Nevada desert is the perfect sound to listen to while sitting on the cedar, and a generous sampling of salacious sex made for posterity. Back in San Francisco, I made a purchase of a few copies of the book Sex by Blanche Welden. There were other books available, but I felt that Sex was the perfect one for me. The book was set in the 1920s, and it was filled with stories of the lives of women who had lived in that era.

Anniversary

The spectacular Stroll of SOMA will light up the night sky once again as the city celebrates the 40th anniversary of the Stonewall riots. The event will feature live music, dancing, and a variety of other activities. It is a celebration of the resilience and strength of the LGBTQ+ community, and it is an opportunity for people to come together and celebrate.

Anomalous

The anomalous factors of the Black Sox scandal are many. The most obvious is the fact that the players were innocent. They were simply caught off guard. The public was outraged. The scandal seemed to have little connection to the complexities of the 20th-century loss of innocence. It is in this context that the film Eight Men Out was made. Directed by David M. Evans, the film stars Tom Berenger, Kevin Costner, and Billy Crystal, and it is a parody of America’s 20th-century loss of innocence.

Soccer, a sport that has never caught on with US sports fans, has a growing fan base in the city. In 1988, the Spikes were crowned as Gay Soccer champions for the second year in a row. The new league is a response to Tom Waddell's call for soccer, a sport that the San Francisco Spikes. The SF Gay Soccer Team responded with a strong showing at the Gay Games in Seattle. Denver, Los Angeles, Phoenix, and other cities were vying for the top spot in the league. Many players are eager to compete, and the league commissioner is looking for new talent to grow the sport. The league is open to anyone interested in playing, and the SF Gay Soccer Team is looking for new members to join. The league is growing in popularity, with more and more people becoming aware of soccer as a sport in the city. This year, there are over 250 more people playing soccer every Saturday. There were only 25 players in the first year, but now there are over 500. The league is growing rapidly, and the SF Gay Soccer Team is committed to growing the sport and making it accessible to everyone.
