by W.J. Brandy Moore

Recent calls by members of the black and gay communities have bolstered the concern that what has appeared to be a long-standing network of support based upon civil and human rights issues may have been imperiled by recent events. It is in this context that the battle against AIDS is renewed.

Odds are filled with poetry, music, art, dance story telling, love and prayer for renewing our commitment to living.

Political Blueprint

Connections Between Blacks and Gays in ’88

by W.J. Brandy Moore

Recent recalls of the rise of the black and gay consciousness has bolstered the concern that what has amounted to a long standing underlying political support based upon civil and human rights issues may have been improperly tamed. The battle lines are drawn around the upcoming November election and support for two supervisors’ seats. The black incumbent supervisor or support for the electoral forces of blacks and gays produced a new agenda whereby our community can make decisions without some reference to the needs and issues of the future. The black community has had a difficult and complex challenge of doing business through dialogue. We prepared the electoral forces as a part of the day’s work. The black and gay community has a long history of struggle that has been ignored or forgotten. The current problem inasmuch as the San Francisco community applies the necessary cloud to the vision and tests the integrity of our political efforts. We are divided by straw enemies time and again.

There is still racism which clouds the vision and tests the integrity of our political efforts. We are divided by straw enemies time and again.

President Reagan’s recent announcement of plans to cut off aid to any country that does not promote human rights and religious freedom violates the essence of our political efforts. We are divided by straw enemies time and again.

Grief
Turns to Anger in Nation's Capital
by Dave Ford
A year after the Gay and Lesbian March on Washington and the first ever overturning of the ban, the 2,100 panel NAMES Project Memorial Quilt of gay and lesbians descended on DC last week for a four-day bash tied to the Quilt at the Ellipse across from the White House and, on the other a 1,000-person prayer demonstration at Trinity's the Maryland headquarters of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

To save space, the poster's key date: the two weeks prior to a coming 10-year review of the FDA's role in the drug approval process. The FDA is responsible for ensuring that new drugs are safe and effective when put on the market, but it's also being criticized for its role in excluding certain groups, such as women and minorities, from drug trials.

NAMES Project officials believe that the drug approval process is outdated and that more needs to be done to include a broader range of people in drug trials. They say the current system is biased against including certain groups, such as women and minorities, in drug trials.

No-Show Announcement
WASHINGTON, DC — When more than 1,000 AIDS activists from more than 60 states descended upon the FDA headquarters last week, they were met with a strange sight: a new FDA proposal ripping the agency's drug approval process.

The FDA proposal, which was aimed at speeding up drug approvals, was met with widespread criticism from activists and other experts who said it would allow dangerous drugs to be approved without enough testing.

The proposal was met with a veritable riot of protest, with thousands of activists descending on the FDA headquarters and surrounding the building with signs and other materials.

Gay Doctor Wins Army Discharge, Scholarship Settlement

by Cathy Crockrell

A gay doctor who informed the US Army of his homosexuality last year and resigned from his commission is winning San Francisco's Lesbian and Gay Medical Center this week a civil suit. Captain Soren Ryberg retained his honorable discharge, and the amount he would have to repay the military for his scholarship to medical school, in a long-awaited settlement authorized by the Army September 29.

Ryberg will not be permitted to re-enter the US military. He told The Sentinel that it was ‘a way of life’ to be in the service. ‘When you have the privilege of serving your country, you have to repay the military for his scholarship to medical school, in a long-awaited settlement authorized by the Army September 29.’

Ryberg joined the military in 1983 after applying for and being accepted into the University of Minnesota's medical school (0-2 year option) in medicine. He exchanged his reserve commitment for a military commitment for eight years after graduation.

In 1985, after receiving his medical degree, he informed the US Army of his homosexuality. With the Army's approval, he began an internship when, with the advice of a San Francisco lawyer, he informed the military he was gay. He also offered to repay the $5,000 scholarship that had funded his medical education in the hope that he could be reinstated into the service.

"I was losing self-esteem," says Ryberg, "and I didn't want to lose the self-esteem that I had, and I was afraid. I was afraid that I would lose the self-esteem that I had, and I was afraid that I would not get the self-esteem that I had." Ryberg attempted to contact the Army for re-employment after the case, but was unsuccessful.

Ryberg's case is that after he informed the US Army of his homosexuality in 1985, the Army concluded that he was not acceptable for military service and denied him the right to re-employment.

Dr. Soren Ryberg,

On January 15, 1980, Inspector John MacLennan of the Hong Kong police force was found dead in his flat with five gunshot wounds in his chest. MacLennan was a senior police officer with the Hong Kong police force for over 20 years. He was known for his quiet and reserved manner, and never seemed to be involved in any controversy. MacLennan was a respected member of the Hong Kong police force and was known for his dedication to his work.

The MacLennan case is significant in the history of homophobia and the struggle for equality for gay and lesbian individuals in Hong Kong. It is a reminder of the challenges faced by gay and lesbian individuals who are working to achieve equality in the face of discrimination and prejudice.

Even while MacLennan's murder was being investigated, other gay and lesbian individuals in Hong Kong were facing discrimination and prejudice in their daily lives. They were often denied the same rights and opportunities as their heterosexual counterparts.

Today, more than three decades later, the struggle for equality and human rights for gay and lesbian individuals continues. The fight for equality is not yet won, and there is still much work to be done.

However, the MacLennan case is a reminder of the progress that has been made in the fight for equality. It is a reminder of the strength and resilience of gay and lesbian individuals who are working to achieve equality in the face of discrimination and prejudice.

We must continue to work towards a world where everyone is treated with respect and dignity, regardless of their sexual orientation. We must continue to work towards a world where everyone is given the chance to live their life to the fullest, regardless of their sexual orientation.

Meaningful action towards equality for gay and lesbian individuals is crucial. It is time to recognize that everyone deserves the same rights and opportunities, regardless of their sexual orientation.

We must continue to work towards a world where everyone is treated with respect and dignity, regardless of their sexual orientation. We must continue to work towards a world where everyone is given the chance to live their life to the fullest, regardless of their sexual orientation.
Harry Britt Announces Opposition

Pro-Palestinian Prop.Gets Mixed Gay Reaction

Supervisor Harry Britt announced Monday his opposition to Proposition W, a November ballot initiative which calls for San Francisco to support a Palestinian call to on the West Bank and Gaza. Britt joins a number of gay community leaders as well as Mayor Art Agnos in the belief that the initiative—though well-intentioned—does not adequately address Israel security concerns.

Britt said the initiative could create conflict within the Middle East by encouraging both her the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) and its critics to escalate the conflict. "This initiative is not a good one," Britt said. "I think it will make things worse." Several leaders in the gay community supported it, including Community College Board member M. M. W. Whitney, Democratic City Controller Doris Cee Whaley, and the San Francisco Democratic Central Committee for Art Agnos.

The move comes in the wake of a more than six-month-long debate that has pitted the gay community against the majority of the Jewish community. Last month, the Alice B. Toklas Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender Community Center, joined forces to launch an education/awareness campaign that has reached thousands of San Francisco residents, raising money for the foundation this year. "As a business manager who has been in the field of AIDS for a long time, I can definitely say that we have been able to raise money and awareness," said Gifford. "We need to continue the work, and we need your help."

Bay Area Activists Target Perry Stone

Weeks after Bay Area activists laid to rest the homophobic tirades of KRON-TV’s Morton Downey, Jr., community members are in again at bay against the latest show called “shock jock” KRSO personality Perry Stone. Stone, who has been a leader in fighting the Dannemeyer Godfather Fund, a local AIDS support group, is urgently seeking volunteers to help improve the lives of people in need and deliver care packages. Some people with AIDS can’t get to a food store. Wouldn’t it be great if they could get some groceries? Imagine something as simple as shopping being too difficult to do. And then someone comes to buy what you need. Shanti Project volunteers do just that. Shanti Project volunteers do just that.

Marines Discharge Seven at Parris Island

NORFOLK, VA - Twelve women at the Norfolk Naval Base are being discharged following a court-martial on charges of homosexuality. The discharge is part of the Navy's policy of discharging homosexuals, which has been under scrutiny since the Pentagon announced last month that it would abide by a federal court order to halt the policy.

According to a military spokesman, the women were discharged on Friday. They are the first women to be discharged in the Navy's policy of discharging homosexuals.

The women are accused of engaging in homosexual activity in violation of Navy regulations. The court-martial was held at Parris Island, South Carolina.

The women's cases are being reviewed by the Navy's Court of Appeals. The women's families have been notified and are currently being briefed on the process.

The discharge of these women is a significant development in the ongoing legal challenge against the Navy's policy of discharging homosexuals.

The Mayor Speaks Out on AIDS, Gay Families and Politics

Moving Forward in San Francisco

The following remarks by Mayor Art Agnos given before the Bay Area Nonpartisan Alliance members and supporters...
How to Pick a Lawyer

The new yellow pages are out, and as usual, they're chock full of advertising for lawyers wanting your business. Since many of us are unfamiliar with the pros of being a lawyer, I thought it would be helpful to see if any help was provided.

I recently spoke with the Yellow Pages about this. A company representative, who was nice enough to give me the names of the reps who work in the area of the_move, said they got the fix right. Apparently it's a duopoly once even an able lawyer added a listing to the Phone Book. "Finance Practice," the same area for the "Financial Advisor," is one of the most popular categories.

Of course, I thought, this just means that some sort of a problem exists with the system. Why would a knowledgeable and capable lawyer be interested in being listed in the yellow pages if the information was correct?

The name, of course, is Adams, because that's what the lawyer works under. And, as I've mentioned before, he is the earliest lawyer to be listed with the "Financial Advisor" in the area. He has been working for about eight years.

I would suggest that if you're in serious trouble, the sexual orientation of your attorney is the least of your worries.

Shanti Project provides volunteers to people with AIDS who need help with chores or just company. Call 415-777-2273 for more information.

Let's not forget about the AIDS Legal Referral Clinic as well. They offer free legal advice for cases involving the law and AIDS. They can be reached at 415-721-0222.

When I've had to deal with attorneys, they've always been friendly and professional. The attorneys are not the problem; it's the lawyers who are. If you feel that you're not getting the best representation, you should consider finding a different attorney.

I hope this helps.

One young man, standing a few hundred feet from the White House, wrote the following last Saturday, using one of the blank, "do-it-yourself" squares included with the unveiling of the NAMES Project Quilt on the Ellipse: "I came hundreds of miles to remember, cry and act; why can't the man in that house ever cross the street??!!"

Larry Willette's statement — noble, embittered, angry — was emblematic of the emotions that marked the Quilt's return to the American capital.

A six-day series of commemorative and political events included the Smithsonian Institution's announcement (Thurs., 10/6) that portions of the Quilt will become permanent additions to the museum's medical history collection; a candlelight vigil (Fri., 10/7) for those who have died from AIDS; the Quilt's unveiling and public display, and reading of names of the dead (Sat. & Sun., 10/8 & 9); and protests at the Department of Health and Human Services (Mon., 10/10) and at the Food and Drug Administration (Tues., 10/11). For complete details, see pages 4 and 5 of this issue.

In a society that does not support homosexual activity, much less recognize same-sex relationships, resources for advice on creating lesbian and gay partnerships (slowly) surviving their demise are difficult to find. Three new books by lesbian therapists, however, make important contributions to understanding the special compositions of our relationships.

Unlike heterosexual couples whose long-term relationships automatically receive economic, legal, social and familial recognition, the legal, social and familial recognition that lesbian and gay couples must earn for themselves is a slow but steady process. This is borne out by the media is because it is a uni-factorial view of things, and only the 'best gay couples' have the attention of the press. Many gay couples exist who are not considered 'good' by any means. This is why the book's message is positive. It perceives gay couples to be different, but it is not reading into that difference. It is a book about gay couples, and it is a book about love. It is a book about what love is, and how it is possible in the world. It is a book about how love is possible in the world, and how love is possible in the world.

David Seltzer’s ‘Punchline’

Stand-Up Turkey

Tom Hanks, at 32, may be the most likely young actor in film today. Regardless of the vehicles he’s given. Hanks has always been better than his material and able to inject humor into the most trying, cliché situations. His role of Steven, a medical student turned up-and-coming comic in director David Seltzer’s ‘Punchline’, talents untaught, but still he provides the movie with most of its bright moments.

It’s Hanks’ film — and a good one. You can’t help but admire the woman of the show that he is larger-than-life, he comes close to saying this turkey but is defined by the impossible scope (also by Seltzer, who wrote the screenplay) who suddenly, in Chicago while macho punch and Peter were baying all the time in a different vocal pitch that they never move from. What happens to Steven and his brother and his father and his grandfather at the Gas Station.

It’s his family — and a good one feels the need to be funny to be torn apart. It’s the people in the audience that is for the most part, not so much for the humor, but for a — even though he’s not looking at you — it’s verebly winning and so obviously — and the woman of the show, she’s — as last long — funny. He has his character into the music. He has his character into the music.

What Seltzer seems to be accomplishing — and often succeeding at — is — a making of the things of the present moment.

Several selections were not achieved. But, you see, the characters on a realized, correctly, comedy compelling success in two of the works presented in Berkeley.

Punchline is a duet for Steven Twelve, set to Poulenc’s Concerto for Two. The other selections, although enjoyable, seem slight, in some cases so minute and so in their offering.

Crackling Sapphism

"...and another with another, not another with anything..." With this line being the first part of a larger thought, it seems to be a fragment of a larger piece, possibly a piece on cultural or art criticism. The text is not complete and doesn't provide enough context to understand its full meaning.

The Mission

The image contains an advertisement for an event called "The Mission: A Life in the Theatre." The event is presented by AHA About Eve, which is described as "a parody of the basic human need to experiment. One leaves still waiting for more - one is unalone." The event runs from 8:30 pm through 11/6 at Studio Culture, and the text suggests it might be a play or performance. However, the advertisement doesn't provide the title or a detailed description of the event's content.

Holly Hughes' 'Dress Suits for Hire'

The text reads, "The better live theater is, the more it tenses me out. And I'm exhausted," by Holly Hughes, who is known for her experimental work in performance art and theater. The piece seems to reflect on the tension and exhaustion that can be associated with live performances. Hughes is known for her avant-garde work, and this text captures a moment of reflection on the nature of her craft.

Patsy Returns to Claim Her Crown The Queen Ain't Dead

The text is an advertisement or announcement for an event titled "Patsy Returns to Claim Her Crown: The Queen Ain't Dead." It promises "While flicking through the channels on TV the other night, I noticed WPBS' Country-Western Music Awards." This indicates the event is related to country-western music and possibly a televised awards show. The text suggests it's an opportunity for music lovers to celebrate and enjoy country-western music through a televised event.

Jerkas, Circle Jerks, and the Golden Shower of the Night of 1,000 Stars

The context here seems to be a list of events or performances, possibly connected to music or entertainment. "Jerkas" is mentioned with "Circle Jerks," which are known for their punk rock music, and "Golden Shower of the Night of 1,000 Stars." This could refer to a music event or festival with a focus on punk rock or a similar genre. The date "10/15, 11pm" suggests this is a live event, likely taking place in a venue that supports such performances.

Soul Anytime, The Chills

The text briefly mentions "Soul Anytime, The Chills," which could be a reference to a music event or performance. The given information is not sufficient to determine the specifics of the event, such as location, time, or further details about the performers or content.

Golden Shower of The Night of 1,000 Stars

The text likely refers to a music event or festival called "Golden Shower of The Night of 1,000 Stars." This could be a reference to a music event or performance that features punk rock or a similar genre, given the mention of "Circle Jerks." The date "10/15, 11pm" suggests this event is taking place on October 15th at 11pm, possibly in a venue that supports punk rock or similar music genres. The text "Oasis was. Her brother is in the Family, has a band sort of way, and finally, a..." suggests a mention or performance by Oasis as part of the event.

Aid to Santa Claus

This text seems to be a reference to a holiday event or activity, possibly related to Christmas. "To aid Santa Claus," it mentions "The Mission," a reference to a holiday-themed event or performance. The text suggests a connection or collaboration between "The Mission" and Santa Claus, potentially indicating a holiday performance or activity involving Santa Claus. However, the context is not clear from the given text alone.

Golden Shower of the Night of 1,000 Stars

The text suggests a music event or festival with a focus on punk rock or a similar genre, as indicated by the names "Jerkas," "Circle Jerks," and "Golden Shower of the Night of 1,000 Stars." The event is dated "10/15, 11pm," suggesting it's taking place on October 15th at 11pm, likely in a venue that supports such performances.
