DOMESTIC PARTNERS, GAY RIGHTS, and AIDS ANTI-DISCRIMINATION LOSE ACROSS STATE

by Daniel Wilson

Gay rights activists across California suffered a major setback Tuesday as voters rejected AIDS antidiscrimination, domestic partners and gay rights ordinances. Anti-gay candidates were also effective in winning seats in local races, often using homophobic themes to get elected.

In San Francisco, voters rejected the city’s domestic partners ordinance by a narrow margin. Opponents of the measure were successful in blocking Proposition S, which would have given some recognition to gay couples. Concord voters dealt a double blow to gay citizens by rejecting the city’s AIDS anti-discrimination ordinance and electing a man to the city council who campaigned against people with AIDS.

The board is presently split evenly between those who support O’Leary and those who oppose her. But she and several supporters are on the committee responsible for appointing board members. According to several sources in the organization, new board members are required to pass a “loyalty test,” not to the organization, but to O’Leary.

Eisentraut says his own decision to resign was based on “a definite dissatisfaction with how the organization was being run,” and said he “couldn’t do (his) job given the huge mess at the NGRA.” He describes the infighting between O’Leary and the legal office in San Francisco as a “civil war.”

O’Leary was the only person, as of press time, to go on the record about the problems at NGRA. In a memo three weeks ago, employees were warned that they would be fired if they spoke with the press, but several sources within the organization have said off the record that they share Eisentraut’s perception that O’Leary is at the heart of the organization’s problems.

There are many, many reasons people resigned,” Eisentraut said, stressing that his comments were his personal opinion. “But at the heart of it is people’s relationships with Jean.”

The staff turnover rate in the Los Angeles office, where O’Leary is and where administration and fundraising are based, has always been high. But in recent months, nearly half the staff have resigned or have announced their intention to resign, although many are staying on until replacements can be hired and trained.

Legal director Leonid Gorf resigned in September and the more recent resignations include Eisentraut, director of administration Ross Ranum, who was given a choice of moving to Los Angeles or leaving the agency, development director Jim McDaniel, public affairs director Ann Bradley, and two other staff members who have not yet notified O’Leary of their intention to resign.

Staff attorney Ben Shatz and Cynthia Goldstein have threatened to resign, and former board members Thomas Horn and Herb Donaldson resigned last spring.

The thing that concerns me is that Jean and the board don’t see the resignations as a symptom of a much deeper problem in the organization,” Eisentraut said.

A meeting of the board of directors this Saturday is expected by some observers to be crucial to the organization’s future. The agenda includes plans to open an office in Washington, D.C., and increase the number of board members from 15 to 25.

DOMESTIC PARTNERS DEFEATED

by Michele DiBello

S an Francisco’s domestic partners ordinance fell to a narrow and suspended defeat that was nonetheless a disappointing blow to gay rights activists across the nation, especially since the defeat occurred in the city that has been the model for the fight since the seventies.

Campaigners described the outcome “about the ordinance’s chances on the November ballot as at best a cautious optimism, but a last chance to distance the senator from the Irvine City Council. But Wilson came under fire from Ir­

The streets of Concord were littered after the quake on October 17.

He added, "the community is not alive and well in this city."

They also voted to repeal an employee, measures that were general­ly designed to help employees with AIDS. Voters in the city also over­whelmingly supported a Proposition for the welfare and education campaign on the ballot in Prop. S by several hundred votes driven by "undecided" voters.

The measure at issue was the Concord City Council, which approved of the or­

A similar measure already exists in Alameda.

San Francisco voters defeated a measure to build a new $115 million baseball stadium. On Tuesday's decision, increasing the likelihood that the Giants baseball team will look outside the city for a new home.

The race was so close that Mayor Art Agnos, who championed the China Basin ballpark plan, waited until 1:00 a.m. Wednesday to concede a "very narrow defeat." By 50.8% to 49.3%.

Prop. P, for the downtown ballpark, was defeated by 49.4% to 50.5% in an "amazing" 44.2% voter turnout for an off-year election, according to unofficial vote counts.

"I wish it had gone the other way, we would have gotten more than a thousand more votes," said a dejected City Supervisor Ross Mirkarimi. He said that the team would remain in San Francisco another year, but the Giants would not play in the city.

"We're going to take a look at the community and what we can do," said Mayor Agnos. Proposition 2 was a "victory for those who want to see baseball in San Francisco," said Supervisor Jean Quan, who wished she had voted for it.

"We're very disappointed," said Supervisor Tom Hickey. "We're going to take this up with the team and see what we can do."

The committee called a press conference for early morning today, but the Giants did not appear. Mayor Agnos said that the committee would meet with the team to discuss the team's future in San Francisco.

"We're going to get the team involved and see what we can do," said Mayor Agnos. "We're going to take a look at the community and what we can do."

To the Editor:

I am amazed and appalled! Once again, tobacco growers have been allowed to come to court to prevent what can only be considered as an early recognition of the problem that is the smoking habit and the dangers that are posed to all Americans. Tobacco is one of the most addictive, harmful, and dangerous, yet it has been allowed to continue to be sold as something other than a drug. I believe that this is an injustice and that we should be doing all we can to prevent this habit from spreading.

The community is in a quandary as to what to do next in the case of the San Francisco Correctional Authority. The Sew Coats have been concerned historically with the provision of services to people who are incarcerated. We believe that it is important to support organizations that are providing these services.

Fallon Correction

To the Editor:

In Tom Miller's article about the new facility for immature offenders in the November 3rd edition of the Sentinel, there is an error. It is stated that there is an effort to make the institution a haven and a rehabilitative center. What is actually happening is that the inmates are being forced to work long hours and are not being given the opportunity to rehabilitate. The inmates are being treated as if they were animals and are not being treated with respect.

I was raised as a Roman Catholic from birth. When I became an adult, I decided to stop believing in God and to become a Christian. I believe that people who are hurting should be given the opportunity to find their own way to peace. God's punishment. No God would want people to be punished for something that they did not do.

TIME FOR A TWO TERM LIMIT

The two term limit for supervisors was pushed off the ballot for this election, but the issue is far from dead. Many of us in San Francisco want to see new faces and new supervisors to be more accountable to constituents.

There is something to be said for continuity, but not for stagnation. Not every original or fresh idea has come from the ballot box, despite problems like AIDS, crime, homelessness, and solid waste. Problems that cry out for imaginative solutions. The most promising cities in the country hum with such a creative spirit.

The gay community would benefit immensely from the two term limit, if it fails to remove the vacuum of imagination. The two term limit would open political debate during election years, keep the money out of politics, and allow more city and state offices to test public policies on the people, and offer to get their message out. In many races, election years have seen candidates focused instead on winning re-election, making the superintendents more accountable to the people.

The renewal of the Constitution by the People should be an open-ended debate on new ideas and policies. If we choose to run our government by the people, then let's give them the right to share in the decision making process.

Black Tuesday

In the face of an unprecedented defeat this week, it seems that the gay community has to do some motoring around priorities, strategies and commitments. The gay rights movement has come to pass a decade of delusional optimism that defenders for the 1980 election year. The gay rights movement has come to pass a decade of delusional optimism that defenders for the new community to do some motoring around priorities, strategies and commitments. The gay rights movement has come to pass a decade of delusional optimism that defenders for the new community to do some motoring around priorities, strategies and commitments.

If we fail to pull together our efforts in the independent sphere, we cannot afford to lose to the Republican forces. In the wake of the Tuesday's devastating defeat, California's gay leadership must pull together and must must must be the future of gay liberation. We can no longer afford to deal with issues on a local level. We need some statewide leadership and coordination.

Without an effective broad-based political action committee and an organization of our own we won't be in any position to work effectively to defend our rights in the ballrooms and the entertainment centers.

Religious rights have been enfranchised, re-registered as and essential political force. We must to do it better and more effectively. If we were to lose control of the organizational advantage, the consequences would be dire. It would mean an end to anything we've been fighting for.

If something good comes out of this limbo and effectively react to what little is available. Whatever the direction our movement takes, we will be more the right to dance with members of the same sex.

Art Agnos On EARTHQUAKES, ELECTIONS AND THE SFPD

by Daniel Wilson

October 30th, San Francisco Mayor Art Agnos spoke with Daily News Editor Donald Williams on a wide range of topics affecting the gay community. Twenty months into his administration, Agnos spoke about his interactions with the black community, domestic partnerships, the ballpark and his relationship with the San Francisco Police Department. The first two questions were asked immediately after Proposition 8.

DW: Why didn’t you speak out on SF Domestic Partners as the Black Leader/ Minority Community did?

AA: That is an unfair thing that has come and gone with my political opponents. The rules of the Black Leadership are well known—black people, gay people, get off your rear end and vote the way I say. So when I was criticized, I got off my rear end and spoke to black leaders. The way they did it was wrong.

DW: So, did you speak to the black community leaders?

AA: I have spoken in the community. I do not have a good relationship with the POA leadership as selling out to the black community. Amos Brown has spoken with black people, white people, and gay people. As for me, if it’s not a matter of violating a form of allegiance, I accept it. It goes with the flow.

DW: So, do you support legalization of gay marriage?

AA: If there were no controversy about it, I would have 100% support for gay marriage. What do you think about comments made by SF police, such as the saying that people have a right to protection against themselves?

AA: I don’t know. I don’t have a good relationship with the POA leadership as selling out to the black community. Amos Brown has spoken with black people, white people, and gay people. As for me, if it’s not a matter of violating a form of allegiance, I accept it. It goes with the flow.

DW: So, do you support legalization of gay marriage?

AA: If there were no controversy about it, I would have 100% support for gay marriage.

DW: Some members of the gay community feel that your approach to the gay community is objective. They are not satisfied with their own approach. They are not satisfied with the way you have approached the community. If they had a gay man who is president of the commission, they would do it a little bit better.

AA: I think that’s fair to ask me, if it’s not a matter of violating a form of allegiance, I accept it. It goes with the flow.

Clarification

Several issues in the Military use of the internet, as an example, is a common practice in the Air Force and the Navy. However, the term "internet" is not commonly used in this context. There is no direct correlation between military internet usage and the problems described in the article. It is possible that the military could be using something similar to what is being described in the article, such as a "sneakernet" or "outernet", but this is not confirmed. The article does not provide enough information to determine if military internet usage is similar to what is described in the article.

The People Behind AIDS for Life by Kathryn Baca

I will take an act of God to interfere with Monday night's planned benefit for the American Cancer Society and various AIDS organizations. But not that organizer Deborah Strobin says. Strobin, a former designer and politico, had many friends to AIDS. When she heard that a former colleague had died from AIDS, and the end of his life she found herself in financial distress, but refused to ask anyone for help because of his pride. Strobin knew that there had to be a way to do something for others in this situation.

"I wanted to do something in the City," she said. "I went to help." Because Strobin contacted Doris Fisher at the San Francisco AIDS Project that's a very close correlation between AIDS and cancer," she said. "I wanted to do something providing the money stayed in the City Area."

What has evolved is a National event that has been underwritten by European universities. Everyone from the shoes to the performers' time has been graciously donated. "We were hurt terribly by the earthquake," Strobin says. "People in New York wanted to help us in San Francisco. When Jerry Herman heard we were doing this he wanted to participate."

The proceeds from the event will benefit the American Cancer Society," she said. "We've lost a lot of people in the East and we lost a lot of people in the West."

"I thought I was special before my diagnosis," she said. "But now I know I'm really not special. If you have a fear of AIDS, don't come to San Francisco."

"I don't want to make the mistake of being voice-activated. As I was talking with a PWA, what if they could have a voice activated," she says. "We've had a lot of people talking about this idea."

"I thought I was special before my diagnosis," she said. "But now I know I'm really not special. If you have a fear of AIDS, don't come to San Francisco."
THEATRE

Christmas Tuna Style
By Kathleen Rava

I t's Christmas time in Tuna, and Vern Dwyer, Dale Stwayne, Bertha Bamiller, and the rest of the cast of Greater Tuna are back on stage at the Martins Memorial Theatre.

A Tuna Christmas is as funny as it is long-running, thanks to its creator, Joe Sears. But what makes this show so appealing is the fact that the characters in the play are all real people, people you know, people who are part of our everyday lives.

The characters are recognizable, the story is relatable, and the humor is spot-on. It's a show that everyone can relate to, and it's a show that never fails to make us laugh.

The show is on for the next few weeks, so if you haven't seen it yet, you should try to catch it. It's a show that everyone should see at least once.

BLACK CHOREOGRAPHERS
Moving Towards the 21st Century
By Henri Dout

In 1990, the National Endowment for the Arts sponsored a project called "The Legacy of Black Choreographers," which was intended to bring attention to the contributions of Black choreographers to the world of dance.

The project was successful in bringing attention to the work of many Black choreographers, but it was also important in creating a space for these choreographers to showcase their work and to be recognized for their contributions.

In the years since, the work of Black choreographers has continued to grow and to evolve. Many have gone on to create successful careers for themselves and to become leaders in the field.

Black choreographers have been at the forefront of the movement to bring diversity and inclusion to the world of dance. They have created new works and reinterpreted classical pieces, always striving to push the boundaries of what is possible in dance.

Their work is a testament to the power of art to create change and to bring people together. And it is a reminder that, even in the face of adversity, the human spirit can triumph.

MORE TO BE THANKFUL FOR

By Steve Warren

A few years ago the fall was written off as dead for new movies; the studios were reluctant to release anything they had hoped for between Labor Day and Christmas. Then the studios started releasing their new movies a week or two early to avoid the fall slump, but not all proved to hold on past October with their showing. Here's how the new changing date affects the results of the fall.

Anne Murray/Volume II

By Tyler Swartman

If you remember the woman whose music was a constant companion in the car, you'll probably recognize her voice on the radio today. She's Anne Murray, and she's been producing and releasing albums for over 20 years. Her latest studio album, "Country Music," is no exception to her prolific career in the music industry. Murray has always been known for her soulful voice and her ability to connect with her audience through her music. In "Country Music," she takes listeners on a journey through the stories of her life, and the songs she sings are a testament to her resilience and strength.

Thumbs Up for Maltese Grille

By Mike Shek

For some time in the downtown of 1920s and 30s, the Maltese Grill was a must for an evening out. A cozy little spot nestled next to the St. Francis Hotel, the club was a favorite of the local Al Capone gang. The place was so intimate that the club was hidden behind a curtain at 4 a.m. and stayed open till dawn, hence the name. The Maltese Grill was a private club, and only accessible to those who knew the password.

The new Maltese Club has recently opened in the old space of the former San Francisco Steakhouse. The menu offers a mix of Italian and Italian-American cuisine, with a focus on seafood and pasta dishes. The atmosphere is cozy and intimate, reminiscent of the old club.

IT'S TIME FOR SOME REAL MUSIC

By Marykope Tobin

It's time for real music for real people by a real woman: Katie Webster's Two Final Mamas (Alligator Records). My background is Separate Lives, a band of 1970s female musicians who were part of the old Dawn Club spirit. Two of the better known artists in attendance over the weekend were a notorious speakeasy in the 20s. It opened at 2 a.m. and stayed open till 7 a.m. After Prohibition, The Dawn Club became a jazz hangout with a renowned manager, Wally and Theatricals. Divided fame two of the better known artists in attendance over the weekend.

For a few moments, I was in a Spanish ski lodge, the kitchen really showed itself. I was there with my friends. I feel the music, the atmosphere, the food. The food and wine from the well regarded Fourth Street Grill in Berkeley, a restaurant on the frontiers of food along with Otez and the Maltese Grill. It comes from the South Sea.

Katie Webster's strong voice defines American at its Best...

Winchester, Team SF I lost again yesterday but imagine. Washed down with a glass of Grand Marnier Chocolat at The Herb and Weft and we're back until early next year. However, you have a chance to see her again in a couple of weeks. The team running the Maltese has been out for the last few days.
